Gin, the Real Killer

Knight, a young negro with wide shoulders, long arms, hands falling below his knees, thick neck, low forehead, got a bottle of gin. Then he was determined to have more gin. He stood at the roadside in the storm, and in the dark, waiting to kill, and get money, from the first person that should come.

"I done it," he said afterward. "I killed the lady. Don't blame nobody else." He lit a cigarette and signed his confession.

The first to pass was a young woman, one hundred feet from her own house. She was strangled, and horribly mutilated. Fortunately, according to doctors, she died of shock, the moment the negro seized her.

"Jersey justice" says it will have Knight, the negro, convicted and in the death house not later than next Monday.

What about the real murderer, the man who sold gin to that negro? He should be in the death house in the next cell. It was the gin that transformed the negro into a gorilla; the gin strangled the unfortunate young woman.

Austria, whittled down to a tiny country around the big city of Vienna, is half starving. It needs energy, thoughtfulness, commercial manufacturing ability, intelligence, capacity for intense application to business. And fools, led by superstitious, murderous demagogues, are yelling in the streets of Vienna, "Out with the Jews!"

That was the cry heard in Spain and Portugal in the Middle Ages. The Jews were driven out. Both countries became miserable failures, while Holland, where Jews were welcomed and treated justly, went upward as fast as Spain and Portugal went down.

"Out with the Jews!" was the cry once in barbarous England. Then Cromwell, great statesman, kicked out the old system. The Jews came back, and the prosperity of England, leading in the world's commerce, began with their return.

The miserable, ignorant mob of Vienna is seeking to drive away the very people that might build up commerce, manufactures, prosperity, and drive out famine.

You probably handed at least one dollar to Uncle Sam for income tax. Of that dollar sixty-eight cents goes to pay for wars that are ended, pensions, interest on war debts, and so on, including what it cost the government to pay private owners of railroads big dividends during the war.

Twenty cents out of your dollar goes to keeping the army and navy ready for the next war.

That leaves twelve cents out of the dollar for everything else that the government spends, the salary of the President and every other official, the cost of justice, education, harbors, canals, everything.

If human beings were not savages intent on killing each other, this government could save eighty-eight cents of every dollar or spend the eighty-eight cents to make the world better instead of merely spending it to prevent killing in war.

A curious thing is what we call "life." Dr. Carrell, French scientist, experimenting for the Rockefeller Institute, can show you today, living, part of the heart of a tiny chick, removed from the shell before it was completely hatched. That small fragment of heart has been kept alive on glass slides, nourished, made to grow and subdivided more than a thousand times.

For nine years it has "lived," and barring accidents, it might live on forever. Every forty-eight hours this fragment of living tissue must be "fed" otherwise it would die of hunger, as you would die after forty-eight days. Puzzle your mind over that phase of the question. "What is life?" Is it mere power to renew tissue?

What about H. G. Wells' statement that the earth "has no imports except meteorites, and no exports of any kind?" How do we know that the brain of man is not a "wireless receiving station," taking in ideas from the outside universe?

And how does Mr. Wells know that we are not "exporting" human souls, that go to live on other planets, or suns, and continue development there?

A lady in Paris calling herself a prophetess says she has lived on more planets than the astronomers have in their catalogues. Her name is Marguerite Wolf. She says she has lived about eight hundred thousand years, and gives details. She thinks, probably, that she is an impostor, but she may not be.

The stones under your feet are many millions of years old. The thought now struggling in our poorly developed brains may have worked on a million other "worlds" and be destined to exist on many billions more. Space and time being infinite NECESSARILY, strange things may happen.

MAYOR IN ROLE OF JOBLESS TRAMP

Spends Night at Wayfarers' Lodge; Chops Wood Four Hours for Breakfast

Attired like a "down and outer," Mayor Peters showed up at City Hall today after spending the night at Wayfarers' Lodge, No. 30 Hawkins street, sleeping in the same dormitory with seventy-five men out of work to get in touch with the unemployment situation.

Bedraggled looking after a restless night disturbed by the coughing of fellow inmates, and the noise of setting up and dragging iron beds across the floor as the place began to fill up, the Mayor was stopped as he attempted to enter his private office by Patrolman Joseph Smith, who failed to see in the miserably clad man the erstwhile immaculately dressed head of the city who paid a tax last year of $100,000 as owner and trustee of various properties.

As "John Stevens, Check No. 49," the Mayor was not recognized by any of the officials of the lodge, although it is run by the overseers of the poor.

His clothes were deloused.

He was forced to take a shower bath.

CHOPS WOOD FOUR HOURS.

He was awakened at 5 in the morning and compelled to chop wood for four hours to earn his breakfast and lodging.

He struck up a friendship with a Maine woodchopper for whom he promised to use his "pull" at City Hall to get a job.

He got a cold stare and a rebuke from the superintendent of the lodge when he attempted to be familiar with him.

NO WEDDING

DUCHESS DE CHAULNES.

Paris, March 16.—The engagement of the Duc de Crussol and Duchess de Chaulnes, daughter of the late Theodore P. Shonts, of New York, has been broken off because of the "cave man wooing tactics" of the ardent young suitor.

The young nobleman wanted the marriage to take place at once and refused to hear any arguments in favor of a postponement.

The Duchess and her mother wanted the ceremony postponed for several months in order that preparations might be made for an elaborate event.

The insistance of the Duke is said to have caused a scene at the palace of the Duchess at Lyons. Angered by the arguments of his fiancee, the Duke motored to Monte Carlo, vowing he would forget everything.

It is reported from Monte Carlo that the Duke has succeeded admirably in wiping out the sad memory of his blasted romance. He is a familiar figure at the Casino and is playing a prominent part at the dances of the younger nobility.

There are reports that the Duke has so far overcome the tragic memory that he has been making love to a Spanish beauty, accompanying her to dances and the tennis courts.

Friends of the Duke are trying to patch up the affair between him and the Duchess de Chaulnes and they insist his affair with the Spanish beauty is only temporary infatuation such as he once had for Gaby Deslys when he followed her to the United States.

AVERT NARROW GAUGE STRIKE

The threatened strike on the Boston, Revere Beach and Lynn Railroad has been averted, according to announcement today by Chairman Edward Fisher of the Division of Conciliation and Arbitration of the State Board of Labor and Industry. Fisher announced the road has agreed to his suggestion that the proposed 20 per cent. wage cut be postponed for one week and that the men have agreed to remain at work during that time.

PARADE DISPUTE PUT UP TO HARDING

The controversy over the question of the appearance of regular army and navy forces in the South Boston Evacuation Day parade was called to the attention of President Harding by Secretary of War Weeks today, according to dispatches from aWshington.

ANOTHER MEETING ON TREMONT TRUST BANK

Another conference of officers of the closed Tremont Trust Company and Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen was held today, making the fifth visit of Tremont heads to the State House this week. Efforts are being made by the Tremont Trust to reopen for business. William T. Miller, chairman of the committee of depositors and stockholders of the bank, and Judge Louis Swig, counsel for the Tremont, attended today's meeting.

LOSES WITH 3 ACES, THEN KILLS WINNER

Fremont, Neb., March 16.—Rickard Dunkle held three aces in a poker game and thought that was enough to win the pot. Ross Wickersham, however, laid down a pat flush and raked in the winnings. Dunkle was so enraged, a witness testified at the trial of Dunkle for the slaying of Wickersham, that he started an argument which resulted in the fatal shooting of the winner.

Prosecutor Won't Ask Death Penalty If Clara Is Convicted of Murder

Ardmore, Okla., March 16.—The trial of Clara Hamon ended shortly after 10 o'clock today. Both prosecution ad defence rested at that time and adjournment was taken until 3 o'clock. Late this afternoon the case will go to the jury.

By International News Service.

Ardmore, Okla., March 16.—Ardmore sat on a powder keg today as the Clara Smith Hamon murder trial was resumed.

"Bad blood" starting at yesterday's demonstration for the woman accused of Jake L. Hamon's murder reached a fever heat as court reconvened. Death threats have been passed. Lawyers, principals and even newspaper correspondents have been warned to go about fully armed.

Deputy sheriffs, wearing huge guns on their hips, are stationed carelessly about the courtroom, but with cool intent of having "good shooting" angles.

All of the out-of-town persons who have had any connection with the trial are preparing to leave on the first train out after the verdict.

The death threats were received by Jake Hamon, eighteen-year-old son of the dead oil king, and the brothers of the accused woman.

Army Transport Damaged Off Atlantic City Makes Way Toward New York

New York, March 16.—The U. S. army transport Madawaska, which was badly damaged in a collision with the Shipping Board steamship Invincible, twenty miles off Atlantic City in a dense fog, early today was making her way to this port, according to wireless advices reaching here.

The Madawaska, inbound from Manila by way of San Francisco, had forty-six passengers aboard. The passengers were still aboard the transport.

The Invincible tore a big hole in the Madawaska's bow and for a time it was feared the transport would sink. Her crew succeeded in stopping the hole, however, and the captain wirelessed that he would be able to bring the vessel into New York.

The Invincible, which was bound from this port in Norfolk, was not badly damaged and stood by the Madawaska, prepared to take off her passengers, if it was necessary.

The commander of the Madawaska is Captain Robert A. Hartlett, who commanded the vessels that took Peary and Stefansson into the Arctic. Immediately after the collision Captain Hartlett ordered his crew to the emergency stations and had all the passengers don lifebelts. A tug was rushed from New York to meet the [transport]. A revenue cutter also was sent out from Atlantic City to stand by in case the passengers were taken off.

Secretary of War John W. Weeks

American soldiers, sailors and reservists are threatened with court-martial if they march in South Boston Evacuation Day parade March 17. Rear-Admiral Dunn of First Naval District and Brigadier-General Ruckman, commander of First Corps Area, Department of the Northeast, have issued orders forbidding participation of troops in uniform because delegations of American Association for Recognition of Irish Republic and of the Friends of Freedom of India are to march. South Boston's Evacuation Day anniversary is an American celebration. The marchers are American citizens. Wish to protest order barring our troops from participating. Urge you to revoke this order and permit troops to march in South Boston tomorrow.

MANAGING EDITOR, BOSTON AMERICAN.

Friends of Irish Freedom of Greater Boston denounce the autocratic action of General Ruckman and Admiral Dunn in refusing to allow service men to parade with the Irish societies that favor Irish freedom. Our boys were in the trenches and on the fighting ships of the navy in the late war when some of those pro-British generals and admirals were at their desks in comfort and safety. We demand that this insulting order be rescinded, and that Ruckman and Dunn be made to understand that they are the paid servants of the people and not self-appointed autocrats.

(Signed) MATTHEW CUMMINGS,
President F. O. I. F. of Greater Boston.

VETERANS TO MARCH DESPITE ORDERS

Ignore Dunn and Ruckman's Orders and Will Parade in Full Uniform

Washington, March 16.—Rear-Admiral Dunn and Brigadier-General Ruckman have authority to bar regular troops from participating in the Evacuation Day parade in South Boston. It was stated at the War and Navy Departments today that the appearance of regular troops of the army and navy in the parade is left entirely to the discretion of the commanding officers.

Former service men and reservists in Boston will defy the orders of Brigadier-General Ruckman and Rear Admiral Dunn and march, in full uniform, in the Evacuation Day parade in South Boston tomorrow.

Officers of various councils of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic are authority for this statement.

John J. Sawtelle, assistant to the marshal for the civic section of the parade, and president of the Dorchester Heights Council, A. A. R. I. R., announced today that hundreds of former service men would brave the court martial threatened if they appeared in uniform in the parade.

He said that at the time of the reception to President de Valera and Mrs. and Miss MacSwiney, similar orders were issued by the military and naval authorities, and that these orders were completely ignored.

"They had an investigation, but nothing was done about it," said Sawtelle. "I have talked with many former officers and men, members of the

BRIGHTWELL IS ACCUSED BY WITNESS

Used McKnight's Name, Says Former Sub-Agent McCuen at Trial

President Charles M. Brightwell of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, on trial in Suffolk Superior Court on charges of conspiracy and larceny, gave his agents to understand that former President Edwin T. McKnight of the Fidelity Trust Company approved his scheme, according to testimony today.

Frederick J. McCuen, a former subagent of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, with offices at No. 27 School street, gave this testimony. He said that President Brightwell, on trial with thirteen others before Judge Fessenden, told him "a Mr. McKnight, wife of an official of the Fidelity Trust," had invested in the scheme.

NAMES TRUST COMPANY.

Brightwell declared, according to McCuen, that when Mr. Knight found this out he started an investigation of his own. This investigation satisfied him that the scheme was honest, Brightwell said, and he invested himself, stated McCuen.

"You can use the Fidelity Trust Company as reference," were the instructions given McCuen by Brightwell, according to the sub-agent.

In his opening argument Assistant Attorney-General Hurwitz indicated he would prove Brightwell "misrepresented facts" by pretending that a prominent bank official's wife and the official himself had invested.

It was in McCuen's office that the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company reached its maturity.

OFFICE NEXT TO PONZI'S.

Considerable legal quibbling arose today when lawyers for the defence tried to show that his office was next door to Charles Ponzi's.

He was finally permitted to answer and said that his office was next to Ponzi's.

Home Rule Demand Is Growing in Boston

Home rule for Boston!

A Boston, free and untrammelled.

Boston emancipated from State domination and control.

These are a few of the slogans in the movement for municipal independence which is hourly gaining impetus. The cry of a "Free Boston" has spread from official and political circles to the taxpayers.

Boston, the "Hub of the Universe," the "Centre of Culture," the "Modern Athens," has been straining for years at shackles clamped on her by the State of Massachusetts.

Boston is one of the strongest Democratic cities in the country. It has long been a thorn in a nominally Republican State. Designing Republicans placed a yoke around the neck of Boston some fifteen years ago and have been cunningly adding to the fetters. Unable to overcome the Democratic majority of from 30,000 to 35,000 at the polls—exclusive of the women's vote—the G. O. P. of the Bay State resorted to more subtle methods.

Indirect assaults were made from unexpected quarters, say Democratic leaders, and, by "gas barrages" and State legislation "Boston was shorn of its municipal power and freedom and became an humble vassal of the Commonwealth."

At any rate that is how the City Fathers appraise it and they don't like it. Nor do the voters. The people of Boston are up in arms. It looks like a civic war.

TAXPAYERS WANT BOSTON FREED FROM STATE YOKE

WIDER MUNICIPAL POWER FOR MAYOR IS URGED

to the fight for home rule when he filed a bill to curb the powers of Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis, seeking a measure that would give the Mayor and City Council authority to check expenditures made by Commissioner Curtis.

When asked if he cared to make any comment on the McDonnell bill, Commissioner Curtis smiled and replied that he did not have his glasses on. A Boston American reporter read the bill, when Commissioner Curtis interrupted to say:

"I never comment on a bill until I have seen it officially, and even then I may not discuss such a measure."

Senator McDonnell summed up increasing public sentiment when he said:

"It is the same fight our forefathers made when they gathered in Faneuil Hall for the Boston Tea Party and dumped the casks of tea into Boston harbor, as a protest against taxation without representation."

As the time for filing such measures had expired, the McDonnell bill was turned over to the Committee on Rules pending question of admission.

Senator McDonnell's colleagues, especially Boston members of the Legislature, heartily indorsed his measure. The home rule spirit is rapidly growing in intensity.

STATE SEAL STARTS PROTEST.

It was precipitated by the action of Police Commissioner Curtis in ordering the State seal to be worn on police helmets instead of the seal of the city of Boston, whose citizens pay the police bills.

A committee of Senators and Representatives called on Commissioner Curtis to protest the use of State seals on the helmets of the Boston police. They told him they thought it an injustice to the taxpayers of Boston. They asked why the changes were made and he told them in Attleboro.

The commissioner told them that in ordering the State seals he was "conforming to the law," as he had notified Mayor Peters.

He remarked that he didn't think the taxpayers were worrying about "such a small matter."

NOT COGNIZANT OF LAWS.

The Senators and Representatives asked Commissioner Curtis if any other city, whose treasury paid to equip and maintain a police force, had been forced to place the State seal on police caps and bilmets. Commissioner Curtis replied that he was not cognizant of the laws of other cities and towns.

As a matter of fact there are only two other cities besides Boston in Massachusetts whose police commissioners are appointed by the Governor and whose police head is, therefore, under State, rather than municipal control. They are Chelsea and Fall River, and, the question arose today, whether they would submit to police helmets being decorated with State seals.

Fall River was the first Bay State city whose police head fell under State appointment and control. Under Chapter 331 of the Acts of 1854 the police commissioner and licensing board of Fall River were placed within the appointive power of the Governor.

HIT BOSTON 15 YEARS AGO.

The same State encumbrance was placed on Boston, under Chapter 291 of the Acts of 1905. Fifteen years ago Governor Curtis Guild appointed the late Stephen O'Meara, former newspaper publisher, commissioner of the Boston Police Department for a five year term at a salary of $6,000. Later the salary was increased to $8,000 and that of the commissioner's secretary from $3,000 to $5,000.

This Act of 1906 abolished the old police board of three and with it the licensing function of that body and took the police department and the important business of liquor and other licenses out of the jurisdiction of the police and into city fathers of Boston.

It was a drastic change, a political upheaval. It was also a municipal rebuke and it caused intense local discussion, indignation and discontent which have been revived from smouldering embers into a flame of home rule agitation and resolve by the adoption of State seals and other recent developments in the police department.

BOSTON VOTERS PAY BILLS.

It meant, and very bluntly, that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, after years of critical watchfulness and Republican impatience and strategy, had concluded that Boston had shown itself to be incapable, and, let this be whispered, unfit, longer to manage its police and license departments. The State felt that she should take over these duties from Boston but that the voters of Boston should continue to pay the bills.

"Ma" Massachusetts figuratively spanked "Daughter" Boston and spanked her good in a tender spot. The State treated her capital city like a spoiled and naughty child, according to the estimates of veteran "pols," interviewed today. They explained that under the old regime patronage and graft were easy.

They said a Police Board appointed by the Mayor and Common Council could perpetuate itself indefinitely by building up a machine with saloonkeepers, distillers and brewers, and trading in promotions of officers in the ranks.

It was explained that the Republican machine saw an opportunity to get a footing in a Democratic stronghold by agitating the appointment of a single commissioner to preside over the destinies of the Boston police force and to establish a licensing board whose members like the Police Commissioner, would be appointed by the Governor.

OPPOSED BY DEMOCRATS.

This plan was vigorously opposed by the Democrats, but in vain. The bill which made Police Commissioner Curtis the first single head of the Boston police force was introduced by Walter A. Webster, on March 20, 1906. The bill which created State control of the police and licensing board in Fall River was filed by W. J. D. Bullock, on January 3, 1854.

The bill creating an excise board in Chelsea, appointed by the Governor, was passed in February, 1916. There are 38 cities and 315 towns in Massachusetts, with a total population of 3,852,356, and only three cities have police departments and license boards under State control. The population of Boston, which for fifteen years has submitted to this regime, was 748,060 at the last census; Fall River, 120,485, and Chelsea, 43,184.

Under the Act of 1906, the new Boston Licensing Board, State controlled, was empowered to assume all duties and authority hitherto enjoyed by the Board of Police of Boston in the issuance of innholders' and victuallers' licenses and the issuance of all classes of liquor licenses. The board was also vested with the powers previously enjoyed by the triple-headed police board under the city ordinances, rules and bylaws and the statutes of the Commonwealth, relative to the licensing of "dogs, picnic groves, skating rinks, intelligence offices, billiard tables and bowling alleys."

REPORTS TO GOVERNOR.

Under the statute, the Boston Licensing Board reports annually to the Governor and not to the Mayor of Boston and its books and records must be open at all times to inspection by the Governor.

The statute in question stipulates that the City of Boston shall provide all quarters and accommodations necessary for the police department, defray the expenses for maintaining such buildings and headquarters and pay the members of the police force, the clerks, stenographers and other employes, upon requisition of said Police Commissioner.

Section 15 reads as follows:

"Except as authorized by the mayor of said city, and except as authorized by Section 37, Chapter 34, of this consolidation and Section 9 of this Chapter, the said Police Commissioner shall not appoint any greater number of patrolmen than the board of police of the city, on the first day of June, 1906, authorized to appoint, nor shall the pay of the members of the police force, other than the said Police Commissioner and Superintendent of Police, be increased or diminished, except by the concurrent action of said Mayor and Police Commission."

Here is found the only slight authority which the chief magistrate of the city has in connection with the administration of the affairs of a police department, that is equipped, housed, paid and maintained by the taxpayers of Boston.

The creation of a State-controlled police force and licensing board was regarded as a serious infringement on the municipal rights of Boston. These encroachments have increased lately in a degree that has alarmed the city authorities and especially political leaders. The Finance Commission recently recommended that the Boston Licensing Board be abolished new that its chief work of passing upon and granting liquor licenses had been ended by the Volstead act. The Finance Commission suggested that abolition of this board would save the city of Boston at least $10,000 annually, but the powers behind the movement to keep Boston as tightly gripped as possible by the Republican octopus are fighting the attempt to remove the Boston Licensing Board.

WANT CENSORSHIP CHANGED.

These unseen powers have started a movement to have the duties of City Censor John M. Casey transferred to the members of the Boston Licensing Board, so far as the censoring of all Boston amusements is concerned. This plan is being opposed.

It is said to be in line with the recent attempt on the part of Attorney General Allen to gain control of the offices of District Attorney Pelletier of Suffolk County, that of District Attorney Tufts of Middlesex, and to dominate the county prosecutors throughout the State.

Police Commissioner Curtis' budget for the year 1921, calling for $4,187,-469 expenditures, was another factor which, with the State seals, gave momentum to the Home Rule campaign. The Commissioner's financial statement showed that salaries for the coming year would amount to $3,228,453; uniforms, $134,000; cost of police listing, $80,000; rents and taxes, $21,000; police matrons, $10,141.

The officials and citizens of Boston feel that as this sum is paid out of their purses, Boston, and not the State, should have the financial ex-penditure.

LEGISLATURE AIDS SCHOOLS.

The Boston School Committee receives authority from the Legislature for the tax limit for school purposes and has twice raised it within two years. The school budget for this year amounts to $14,000,000.

This is another instance of Boston's lack of Home Rule. Whenever the school committee wants to raise the teachers' salaries or desires additional appropriations of two to three millions for school buildings, they seek the aid of the Legislature and not the Mayor and City Council.

The Mayor has the approval of the Legislative Act. But two or three weeks ago, after approving an act which increased the tax limit for the purpose of raising teachers' salaries, the school committee boosted the pay of certain teachers about $400 in violation of their agreement with the Mayor, the finance commission and the Governor not to exceed $216. The Mayor, exercising his authority, promptly vetoed the school committee's action, but his veto was ignored by a two-thirds vote.

A Petition for Home Rule in Massachusetts

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of Massachusetts:

We, the undersigned citizens of Boston, demand Home Rule in Boston.

We oppose any move toward centralization of power over local affairs in the hands of State officials.

We believe that the people of Boston should have the right to govern the administration of the Boston Police Department, and Therefore, we respectfully urge you to vote for the bill introduced in the Legislature by Senator William H. McDonnell of South Boston, giving the Mayor and City Council of Boston power to approve or disapprove expenditures for the Boston Police Department.

Name .....

Address .....

If you are in favor of Home Rule for Massachusetts cities and towns sign the above petition, get your friends to sign and mail it to the Home Rule Editor, Boston American, 80 Summer St., Boston.

He will see that your petition is sent to your representative and senator at the State House.

Hub Lawmakers Condemn State Seal for Police

Every pressure will be brought to bear upon the committee on rules to admit Senator McDounell's bill to curb the power of Police Commissioner Curtis for action by the Legislature. The Boston delegation, with the support of many Representatives and Senators from other parts of the State, will then open up the entire question of status and control of the Boston police.

Members of the Legislature who have already signified their disapproval of the State insignia being put on the caps of Boston policemen are:

Senators Green, Carey, Englert, Donovan, McDonnell of Boston and Shea of Holyoke.

SENATOR THOMAS H. GREEN of Charlestown—I am opposed to Commissioner Curtis putting the seal of the Commonwealth on Boston policemen.

If Commissioner Curtis maintains that the Boston police are a State department, and that is upheld by the courts, then I propose that the expense of maintaining the department be paid by the State and not the taxpayers of Boston.

Furthermore I don't believe a subordinate official like Commissioner Curtis should make any moves without consulting the Mayor and Council of Boston.

SENATOR JOHN J. CARREL of Dorchester—Putting the State seal on the caps of the policeman is simply an attempt of State officers to take over a municipal department. Boston pays the bills and should be the one to say what shall and shall not be done by its police force.

REPRESENTATIVE FRANCIS X. COYNE of Dorchester—Commissioner Curtis, in placing the State seal on the Boston police, has told the entire country that Boston is losing its identity. I have been opposed to Mayor Peters on many issues, but I admire his stand on the police question.

CITY COUNCILLOR JOHN DONOGHUE—It's a small matter, but it seems to me that common courtesy would dictate the adoption of a city of Boston seal upon policemen's uniforms. The city pays the bills.

These considerations should influence Commissioner Curtis to place a city of Boston, not a State seal, upon the uniform of our police. It is just another instance of how Boston is being deprived of home rule.

CITY COUNCILLOR FRANCIS J. W. FORD—I think Mayor Peters is absolutely right in insisting that it is a Boston police force, paid by the citizens of Boston, and that it should have Boston's seal, if any.

Gradually from year to year the Legislature has been taking away from Boston the authority to do things for itself, to appoint and control its own officials. The result is today we have about as much home rule as Ireland.

CITY COUNCILLOR WALTER L. COLLINS—The Boston police force should have a city seal. They ought to have a distinctive symbol representing the community they serve. The city of Boston pays all the bills and the citizens expect in return for it that the department should be a strictly Boston department and so represented.

EX-REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT J. WARE—Mayor Peters is right in his demand that the police wear the insignia of the city upon their caps. Commissioner Curtis had no right to take the stand he took. As the people are taxed to support the police force, the Mayor, as a representative of the people, should have something to say in regard to this matter.

CITY COUNCILLOR JAMES T. MORIARTY—I think the State badge is nothing less than a scheme to make the Boston Police Department a part of the State constabulary.

Any patrolman who has to submit to punishment duty in the future may be sent to some out of the way parts of the State to work out his punishment under this State police plan.

DR. WILLIAM J. SHEEHAN, South Boston—As long as the city of Boston pays the bills, the people should have something to say as regards the uniform worn by the police. The city should have absolute control of the force.

THOMAS P. O'CONNOR, South Boston real estate dealer—The city pays the expenses and should have something to say relative to the uniforms of the officers. The people should have some say in the matter of dress or anything else pertaining to the police, in as much as they are a Boston paid force.

Advertising makes shopping simple and pleasant. It brings the merchandising world into your home—shows you what you may expect to find on the counters and shelves of our leading merchants. Every day advertising helps you make speedier and more satisfactory selections at a saving.

Advertising has made quality the unswerving standard of merchandising, and practical economy the efficient agency against the high cost of living.

There is no mystery about advertising.

It has none of the qualities of the magician's silk hat. It is the light that shines through the windows of the shop or merchandising institution, giving it character and standing with you and your neighbors.

Advertising is the soul of trade—the greatest economy to both consumer and advertiser. It enables the advertiser to make more sales at a smaller margin of profit, and gives you the benefit of the resultant lower prices.

If you deal with merchants and manufacturers who advertise, you may effect economies which otherwise might be unknown to you.

Today when men and women are anxious to make their every dollar reach maximum efficiency in buying, the regular reading of advertising will prove to be as pleasurable as it is profitable.

MRS. STOKES FAINTED IN BACHELOR'S SUITE, SAYS WITNESS

BEDROOM SCENE IS REVIEWED

Observations From Tin Roof of Wallace's Chamber Related by Former Bostonian

New York, March 16.—Charges of "crooked-up witnesses" and bitter passages of courtroom controversy between opposing attorneys enlivened this day's sessions of the Stokes divorce trial.

Testimony introduced by W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotel owner and sportsman, against Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, his young wife, continued to bear upon the allegations of misconduct with Edgar T. Wallace, now in the oil business in San Francisco.

Cross-examination by Martin W. Littleton was calculated to shake the positive assertions of a group of witnesses in behalf of Stokes, who told the tales of the hallways, bedrooms and a certain tin roof at No. 13 East 8th street, where Wallace is said to have had a bachelor apartment.

The first touches of the Springtime that is greening the lawns of City Hall Park outside the courtroom window penetrated the grim official within today. Mrs. Stokes appeared in a new garb.

WAR WITNESS FOR STOKES.

The star witness for the plaintiff was Mrs. Genevieve La Croix De Anquinos, formerly a resident of the Thirty-fifth street apartment house contemporary with Wallace, and of an admitted activity in assistance to Stokes' alignment of evidence and testimony.

Mrs. De Anquinos took the stand with an air all her own. She was garbed in a dark gown of fashionable shortness, embroidered with a blue that was repeated in her hat, which carried a wisp of veiling at a jaunty angle. Mrs. De Anquinos is a blonde of sharp features and sharp words delivered with a snap.

Under examination she revealed that she had brought two others of the day's witnesses, Mr. and Mrs. Zenias Matteolan, into the case and that she had made an excursion to Newport and Atlantic City at Stokes' expense to look up the maid who had attended the Wallace apartment.

"You were paid for this?" Littleton asked.

MET IN "PEACOCK ALLEY."

Mrs. De Anquinos' testimony was to the effect that she had first seen and met Mrs. Stokes as "Helen Wood" in "Peacock Alley" at the Hotel Astor. The witness related that while living in the Thirty-fifth street house she went to Wallace's apartment for the purpose of trying to sell his a puppy.

"When I got down there Mr. Wallace came out of the bathroom, and Mrs. Stokes followed him. She screamed and jumped back.

"Then I said: 'I suppose I am intruding,' and went out."

Testimony indicated that Wallace later bought the pup.

On cross-examination Mrs. De Anquinos, in spite of Littleton's efforts, persisted in getting out answers to describe an incident in which she said Mrs. Stokes came into the hall screaming, then fainted.

Zenias Matteolan, a native of Armenia, formerly of Boston and now an architectural designer and draughtsman, took the stand to review the story told by his wife the day before on observations of Wallace's bedroom from the tin roof at the back of the house.

IDENTIFICATION ATTACKED.

He was a less willing witness than his wife had been, but he told of seeing a woman he identified as Mrs. Stokes, in Wallace's bedroom fixing her hair before a mirror, standing in her underclothes, while Wallace, the witness said, stepped to the window and drew the shade.

"How do you identify this woman?" demanded Littleton in a discussion of angles of view.

"By the ensemble," replied the witness.

This led to questions of attack on the identification and clash of attorneys.

Littleton flailed out sharply:

"Any of these cooked up witnesses that you have can do it."

Pope Sends Special Blessing to America

By International News Service.

Rome, March 16.—A special blessing for the American nation was uttered by Pope Benedict when he received Cardinal Dougherty in private audience Tuesday.

The Cardinal knelt as he entered the papal chamber, but the Pope raised him up and embraced him, at the same time expressing his fatherly love for all American people.

Later the newly created American cardinal received his International News Service correspondent at the American College.

"To say that I was thrilled at the cordial reception of the Holy Father would be to understate the facts," said the Cardinal. "I was deeply moved."

MADISON BOMB PROBE BY U. S. AUTHORITIES

Madison, Me., March 16.—An investigation based on the belief that the bomb which seriously wounded Dr. John L. Pepper, prominent practitioner, was manufactured in Madison, was started here today.

The investigation was begun by High Sheriff John A. Moores of Skowhegan and Deputy Sheriff Elmer S. Adams, following a conference with County Attorney James Thorne.

The latter would make no statement and would only say that there might or might not be an arrest.

It was stated that postal inspectors were on their way to take a part in the investigation, having been brought into the case owing to the fact that the infernal machine was sent through the mails.

MAILED IN ANSON.

The bomb, wrapped in a package resembling a shoe box and mailed from Anson, a small town across the Kennebec River from Madison, was opened by the physician at his office on Old Point street.

As he tore off the wrappings the infernal machine exploded with a roar, wrecking the physician's office, the windows, and mangling the body of Dr. Pepper.

William G. Heald, a gardener, rushed into the house and found the physician unconscious and bleeding in the middle of the floor. He died in a short time before he could be moved.

Heald secured the body of Dr. Pepper was rushed six miles to the hospital on a flat car over the line of the Somerset Traction Company.

STARTS INVESTIGATION.

County Attorney Thorne, a resident of Madison, began an immediate investigation, aided by Deputy Sheriff Adams and later by the high sheriff. They traced the package from Anson, where it was mailed some time before 9 o'clock last night, according to Miss Fannie Pinkham, the postmistress.

Dr. Pepper is one of the leading practitioners in Somerset County, in years old. He is president of the Madison Board of Trade and served in the medical corps during the year. The bomb was believed to have been constructed in the form of a pipe, filled with slugs, with common black gunpowder as the explosive.

Dr. Pepper is a native of the late Rev. Dr. G. D. B. Pepper, who was president of Colby College at Waterville. Both Rev. Dr. Pepper and his son and Concord, a well-known artist, is a cousin of Dr. Pepper.

MAY BUY WILLIAMSTOWN HOTEL FOR ILL WAR VETS

Soviet Chief Bares Details of Revolutionary Plot Against Kronstadt

(Copyright, 1921, by the International News Service.)

Moscow, March 11, by Wireless to Berlin, March 16.—"The Kronstadt mutiny will soon collapse regardless of the fact that the mutineers possess heavy artillery," declared Leon Trotsky, people's commissar for war in the Russian Soviet government, who arrived here today from the "Petrograd front," where he has been directing the Red troops against the rebels.

Trotzky said:

"It is impossible to understand the Kronstadt event unless taken in conjunction with our internal and external situation. Our economic situation after six and one-half years of war is well known. We have published frank statistical statements.

"We do not consider it necessary to conceal our actual conditions from our workers, from our country or from our friends and our enemies in other countries.

"BANANA PEEL."

"Quite naturally, these parties which, two or three times before gave demonstration of their impotency, should try to revive themselves by using conditions as the present moment of the workers' revolution.

"I am speaking of social revolutionaries and mensheviki who are unable to play an independent role, are unable to obtain or maintain themselves in power. They have no stable social foundation. They are trying to be the banana peel on which the working class would slip into counter-revolution against the Soviets.

"As is the ruling, the Baltic fleet represents the spirit of our country most exposed to Europe. During the past two years the personnel of the fleet has changed greatly. The best elements were taken out and transferred to other branches of Soviet work and were supplanted by casual elements, among which were many representatives of the counter-revolutionaries who regarded their service in fact as temporary.

"The transitory conditions and unstable personnel of the fleet created the possibility of the generals' evil genius opportunity for smuggling into the fleet elements that were openly hostile.

USED DEMANDS AS FULCRUM.

"The masses of sailors formulated demands which originally did not exceed the demands presented by various groups of laborers to the Soviet government. The revolutionaries utilized their demands as a fulcrum for their lever. Behind their backs cautiously emerged the figures of revolutionary officers.

"The broad masses of the Kronstadt population kept silent, without understanding the acuteness of the conflict. Kronstadt being located upon the ice, was prevented by the gateway from which the world's highways lead to the imperialistic countries.

"At Reval the White Guard officers became active, and counter revolutionary agents in the Baltic fleet began to establish a contact with Kronstadt. The Soviet power, fearful the movement became badly frightened and began to complain of the growing influence of the counter-revolutionary military officers, but then it was too late.

MUTINY WILL COLLAPSE.

"Quite obviously after the ice is gone from the Gulf of Finland the counter-revolutionaries could remove their vessels a safe distance from the hands of the imperialists, as they did last year in the Black Sea if the Baltic fleet fell into the hands of the Reds.

"Knowing this we presented an ultimatum to the mutineers and then applied armed force. There is no doubt that the mutiny will have collapsed within a short time regardless of the fact that the mutineers possess heavy artillery.

"The demonstration at Kronstadt showed the garrison and the population that Petrograd was ready against an armed struggle.

"This immediately brought about disintegration of Kronstadt and Garrison. Sooner or later Kronstadt will return into the fold of the Soviet and the world imperialists will have suffered another new disappointment.

ABE ANGORN MISSING; POLICE START SEARCH

The Boston police have been asked to aid in the search for five-year-old Abe Angorn, Jr., of No. 313 Dover street, who mysteriously disappeared from home yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Abe Angorn, parents of the child, are frantic in their efforts to find the boy. The only theory of the boy's disappearance is that he has been kidnaped. When last seen the boy was playing on the sidewalk in front of his home. An automobile had stopped nearby. When the mother called to him the machine sped off at a fast clip.

CHILDREN'S SOCIETY IS GIVEN $5,000 BEQUEST

At the monthly meeting of the directors of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, No. 42 Mt. Vernon street, John H. Stirgis, treasurer, presided over the $5,000 bequest under the will of Clara B. Kimball, and also the receipt of $5,400, part payment of the bequest from the estate of Marie A. Evans. He further announced that contributions received since the first of January had decreased 18 per cent, from last year's receipts.

MISSISSIPPI RAISING TURKEY FOR HARDING

Washington, March 16.—H. W. Mason, a planter at Crystal Springs, Miss., has notified President Harding that the White House Thanksgiving turkey has been selected by him. Mason says he is scientifically nurturing the gobbler to prove that Mississippi can produce an exceptional breed of gobbler.

"Fifi" Potter Names Show Girl as Co-respondent

Mrs. "Fifi" Potter Stillman, who possesses divorce suit affidavits charging her husband's closest friend for three years has been an obscure actress.

New York, March 16.—A new and sensational turn in the Stillman divorce complications came today with the disclosure of the identity of the young woman, who, according to affidavits in the possession of Mrs. "Fifi" Potter Stillman, has been for three years the closest woman friend of her bank president husband.

Stillman, according to these affidavits, visited this young woman, who is known as Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, under an assumed name. She, the affidavits say, was until about three years ago, connected in a minor capacity with the stage. She was the daughter of a small shopkeeper.

Then suddenly she became the possessor of fine raiment, limousines, jewelry, and the residence of richly furnished apartments. And to these apartments regularly came James A. Stillman, president of the National City Bank, according to information obtained.

Mrs. Leeds has a two-year-old son —blond and blue eyed.

That within a month the trial of either the case against Mrs. Stillman and her son Guy, by the great banker, or the proposed new and possibly startling counter-divorce suit against Stillman may be shifted to California or Nevada, was predicted.

At any rate, John F. Brennan, counsel for Mrs. Stillman, appeared before Justice Morschauser in White Plains announcing that by agreement he represented both parties in a stipulation for an indefinite postponement of the trial.

NEW FAMILY ALIGNMENT.

It became known today that a new family alignment has been made in the Stillman household, since the breach between the internationally known banker and his wife, the former "Fifi" Potter, occurred something less than a year ago.

Seventeen-year-old James Stillman, known as "Bud" to his intimates, is sticking to his mother. Not only that, but it is declared that he stands so little in the awe of his father the president of the National City Bank, that he almost came to blows with him in defence of his mother and in support of the demand that the elder Stillman drop the divorce proceedings.

Bud's indignation was fanned to a white heat when he learned that his father's accusation linked with his mother's name the Canadian guide, Fred Beauvais. The guide had been his woodcraft instructor and his pal.

SERVANTS DIVIDED.

Miss Anne, the daughter, who is said to be in a finishing school in Massachusetts, visits both her father and mother, but is declared to be in active sympathy with the latter.

Information seems to show that there is a division of feeling among the large number of servants at the Stillman place in Pocantico Hills. The mates of that citadel are barred and guarded against the millionaire's wife.

MAYOR LODGES AT HOME FOR JOBLESS

Gives Superintendent Surprise of His Life Upon Returning Later in Day

experience had shown him the unemployment situation was serious. His hands were blistered from first-hand contact with a woodpile.

"The seventy-five men were strong, able-bodied, he said. "I talked with many of them and found they had come from various parts of the country. Some of them had been in Boston for two months without work.

"They were not dissipated looking and were for the most part young men. Many had worked in the woods of Maine and New Hampshire. Some came from New York. All said it was difficult to find work in Boston."

The Mayor wore an old slouch hat, a dirty, stained raincoat, a gray shirt with a khaki handkerchief knotted under his collar, old suit and a days' growth of beard when he showed up at Wayfarers' Lodge.

BOOKED AS "JOHN STEVENS."

No one recognized him as he got into line at 10 o'clock.

"I gave the name of John Stevens and received check No. 75. I got in line with four ahead of me. I took off my coat as the others did, and they were hung up in a fumigating room. Then I took a warm bath. We got our clean shirts, hats, socks and shoes, and then I went to the second floor and we assigned a bed with 30 or 40 in the room.

"Some of the men had colds and coughed all night. The beds were comfortable. We got no sleep until midnight and they were dragging beds across the floor. After that I slept fairly well.

"In the morning a bell rang. I hadn't my watch, but was informed it was 5 o'clock. I went downstairs, took an axe and split wood from that until 9 o'clock when we had breakfast. Some of the men piled up wood.

"The man who was piling for me was a Boston woodpecker. He told me he had best his way to Boston by freight. He offered to chop the wood and my pile, but I did not believe he would work. I told him I might be able to help him as I had a pull with a man at City Hall and he said shi mo come here at 2 30 o'clock."

The Mayor said the breakfast of oatmeal, milk, bread and coffee was excellent, all but the coffee, and that there was plenty of it.

SHOCKS SUPERINTENDENT.

"After breakfast I went up to the superintendent of the lodge whom I had met before and wishing to make some pleasant remark asked him if he didn't know a good many of the people who came to the lodge told me a cold stare and replied: 'I don't have to know anyone. I don't want to.' He was at the door when I left and I told him I would come back some time and that I hope he would remember me."

The Mayor went later to pose for the Boston newspaperers, and gave the superintendent the shock of his life.

The Mayor declared himself most anxious to get employment for the men at the lodge. He said he would recommend an appropriation of $42,000 to the City Council, to add additional shower baths, storerooms and kitchen and to overall the dormitories at the lodge.

WHO TOOK TIRES OFF RED CROSS AUTO?

Surprise on the part of the visitor.

Certainly. Visitor to corner policeman, who delivered philosophy as follows: "Lord bless you, ma'am, the Apostle Paul himself would not be safe from those tire thieves. If he stayed in Corinth long enough to rain and go inside for a while, they'd take his shoes, if they had time to loosen 'em, before the rain let up. It's a queer thing! The Red Cross needn't have no feelings hurt."

There the Red Cross feelings are not hurt. But, in the meantime, Red Cross would like to know who is the man who took the tires.

U. S. DENIES LEAGUE'S AUTHORITY IN PANAMA

Washington, March 16.—This government regards any dispute between Panama and Costa Rica as not justifiable by the League of Nations, it was stated authoritatively today, following a report from Geneva that Panama has appealed to the league.

Submissions of questions between any Latin-American Republics to European powers, it was held, is a recession from the mandates of the Monroe Doctrine, it was pointed out. Such a step would serve to stir the political relations between the United States and Panama antedate the league.

OVER $600,000,000 PAID ON INCOME TAX

Washington, March 16.—The usual last minute rush of taxpayers to file their returns before midnight last night today found the offices of collectors of internal revenue clogged with a mass of work. Estimates of the taxes paid up to yesterday varied between $600,000,000 and $750,000,000.

WILL HOLD DEBATE ON CALDER COAL BILL

The prize debate of the Fulton Debating Society of Boston College will be held Friday evening at University Heights. The question discussed will be: "Resolved: That Section 12 of the Calder Coal Bill should be rejected." Harold J. Sullivan of Dorchester and Henry E. Foley of Roxbury uphold the affirmative, opposed by Eugene J. Sullivan of Wakefield and Francis J. DeCelles of Somerville.

Watson Suggests Seal For Curtis' Auto

City Councillor James A. (Jerry) Watson visited Police Commissioner Curtis today on matters of moment. During the visit he suggested the State seal be placed on a police department automobile standing outside in Pemberton square. This was in accordance with the commissioner's act in placing State seals on policemen's caps.

Commissioner Curtis agreed with Councillor Watson that the State seal would improve the appearance of the automobile. No order for the change was given however.

EXTENDS TIME FOR CLAIMING DEPOSITS

Commissioner Allen Seeks 28,000 on Books of Closed Trust Companies

An extension in time to file claims of depositors and creditors of the four closed trust companies in Boston was announced today by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen, because more than 28,000 persons had failed to register at closing time last night.

Though he did not set a definite date when all claims must be in, it is understood he will give the delinquents about two weeks. Failure to file claims will work a disadvantage to persons having their funds tied up.

They run the risk of losing what they are entitled to and very good excuses will be necessary after this extension of time has ended.

"I don't understand why the claims are not filed," said Commissioner Allen. "If the depositors owed the bank money there may be some explanation.

"Postcards have been sent to those failing to file claims. Some have moved, and in those cases the claims have been delivered to them. But an unfortunate feature is that the number who have not filed is not large in comparison with the great number who have not filed."

DEATH THREATS MADE AT HAMON GIRL'S TRIAL

over had to go through and I'm relieved it's all over," said Clara Smith Hamon on entering the courtroom. She was pale and looked as though she had spent on the witness stand.

Attorney - General Freeling, in charge of the prosecution, today confirmed the report that the prosecution would not ask the death penalty for Clara Hamon if the jury finds her guilty of murder. "We will not ask the death penalty," Freeling said.

The prosecution of Hamon to Clara were barred from evidence by Judge Thomas W. Champion this morning. Attorney-General Freeling objected to their admission on the ground that the witnesses would not be called as a witness to explain them.

When court opened at 9 o'clock the room was jammed. Many had been sitting in the courtroom since 6 o'clock and had brought their breakfasts.

On the opening of court Sam Blair, the newspaperman who found the accused slayer in a cabin, was the first witness called by the State in rebuttal.

STRIKERS PICKET BUILDING ON CORNHILL

Nearly 300 striking building trades workers gathered on Cornhill today to picket a six-story building under construction at No. 9. They had heard twelve men had been put to work. A detail of eight patrolmen and a sergeant were on hand from the Court square station to keep order, but their efforts were not required. Rain interfered with the pair presenting any work being done. The building is being erected by W. A. & H. A. Root of No. 1 Beacon street.

WILSON'S FOE SLATED FOR SHIPPING HEAD

Washington, March 16.—Representative George W. Edmonds of Philadelphia, recognized House leader on Merchant Marine affairs, who suggested impeachment of President Wilson for his failure to enforce the treaty nullification provision of the Merchant Marine act, has been slated for appointment to the Shipping Board chairmanship by President Harding.

U. S. Labor to Demand Trade With Russia

Washington, March 16.—Signatures of a commercial agreement for exchanging products of Great Britain and Soviet Russia gives new incentive to efforts to secure a similar agreement between the United States and Russia, E. C. Davison, secretary of the International Labor Board, said today, declared today.

Davison said the Machinists' Union withgreat vigor would renew efforts to secure trade with Russia in order that the labor-ing people of this country" may benefit from the increased industry which would follow the opening of the Russian commercial field.

"We have done everything within our power to call the attention of Congress and the administration to the necessity for trade with Russia," said Davison. "We intend to continue to exert our efforts in that direction and we will appear before Congress at the earliest possible moment to the special session."

SERVICE MEN TO MARCH DESPITE PARADE BAN

To Defy Court-Martial by Appearing in Uniform in Evacuation Day Celebration

American Legion, and they all tell me they are going to turn out in larger numbers than anticipated, and that they are going to wear their uniforms."

LEGION HEAD TO MARCH.

James T. Duane, State Commander of the American Legion, commenting upon the order, said:

"I have been invited to participate and I certainly intend to avail myself of that invitation.

"Year after year this historical event has been celebrated in this manner, and this is the first time I have any knowledge that such an issue has been raised.

"If this issue is carried to its logical conclusion, no American service man would be permitted in the future to take part in any parade in which floats and similar devices of patriotic bodies, regardless of their origin and purpose, would participate.

"The United States is a cosmopolitan country and invites all her people to take part in her historical exercises. The annual celebration of Evacuation Day is distinctly the commemoration of a great American event. It seems as though they are dragging the spirit of Blue Sunday into Evacuation Day."

John F. Harrigan, State president of the Massachusetts Council, A. A. R. I. R., announced today that he had forwarded to President Harding, Secretary of Navy Weeks, Secretary of War Denby and Senators Lodge and Walsh a telegram demanding "in the name of 1,250,000 citizens of the State of Massachusetts" the immediate revocation of the order forbidding the appearance of American soldiers, sailors or reservists in the parade.

The telegram sent to Washington officials by the Irish association was made public today by F. J. Morgan, chairman of the association's publicity committee. It reads:

"IS THIS DEMOCRACY?"

"General Ruckman and Admiral Dunn, according to press statements today, say that to permit troops to march in a partisan demonstration, especially one unfriendly to a sister nation, would be serious breach of international amity.

"Evacuation Day, March 17, is a local demonstration of loyalty and patriotism, that in no manner by its name can stop. Are these officers American or satellites of a foreign government?

"Ruckman and Dunn asked officials of the Ancient Order of Hibernians Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic intended to participate in the parade.

"When told 'yes,' they warned the officials against allowing men in the United States Army to march in the parade, whether these men are service men or reservists.

"Are these officers autocrats, or is this a democracy?

"They say that no authority can reverse this edict. It is for Washington to say whether they are autocrats. As Americans we demand immediate action in the name of 125,000 citizens of Massachusetts, and the reversation of these orders from Ruckman and Dunn."

Captain Francis L. Logan, adjutant of the 101st Regiment, National Guard, and brother of Brigadier-General Logan, declared that the famous "Fighting Ninth" would be in the parade 1,500 strong.

General Jesse F. Stevens, head of the Massachusetts Division of the National Guard, said that whether or not members of the Guard from the line, was up to the individual commanders.

Dr. William H. Griffin, chief marshal of the parade, announced that the procession would be held without any representatives of the regular army and navy. He admitted that Admiral Dunn had cautioned him not to wear his naval lieutenant's uniform.

COURT-MARTIAL THREATENED.

Interested organizations claim that the army and navy heads threatened any soldiers, sailors or reservists taking part in the procession with court-martial.

Chief President John F. Harrigan of the A. A. R. I. R. sent the following telegram to President Harding, asking that the decision be revoked:

"Has the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic violated principles, precedent, law or custom of our country? If not we demand as Americans, that the action taken by Rear Admiral Dunn, commandant of the Third Naval Department of the Northeast, whereby American soldiers, sailors and reservists are forbidden to parade in court-martial if they participate in the Evacuation Day parade, South Boston, March 17, in uniform with members of our organizations, be revoked.

"This is an insult to us as Americans and violates all precedent and law.

HAPGOOD URGES HARDING TO FREE DEBS

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Editorial Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, March 16.—The highly intelligent advice which I offered to the Socialists about Debs is apparently to be disregarded. They maintain that their arrangements have gone so far that it is too late to change. Their executive secretary writes me a reasonable and calm letter on the subject.

Norman Hapgood

On the other hand the Jewish Forwaerts and other Socialist organs, as well as the amnesty committee of the American Federation of Labor, are urging that my position be supported and the demonstration be called off. The outcome is not yet determined. The amnesty committee of the American Federation of Labor is organizing appeals from all over the country for speedy pardons.

It would undoubtedly be simpler if Mr. Daugherty and President Harding should act and thus end a bitter wrong and at the same time save the community the bore of having to read about more picketing.

Harding Should Make Demonstration Unnecessary

The "big demonstration" in Washington is slated for April 13 and 14. Delegations from many parts of the country are to invade the town, hold mass meetings, parade, present to Congress a petition, which they hope will be signed by a million persons and ten thousand labor unions; interview every Senator and Congressman who can be waylaid, and picket Congress, as well as the White House, with banners which will bear devices full, no doubt, of truth and indignation. But how much more sensible it would be to make all this truth and indignation unnecessary by a prompt act on the part of the administration. If it wanted to put one over on the demonstrators, it might say on April 1.

Why are April 13 and 14 chosen? To celebrate the second anniversary of the imprisonment of Eugene Debs. You will notice that Debs went to prison five months after the war was over and he went on a ten-year sentence. This is the moderation we have been showing, and there are several hundred others in prison for similar differences of opinion with the majority in war time.

Punishment in U. S. Is Most Savage

But why two dates for the demonstration? Because luck makes it possible to call attention to the savagery with which dissenters are still being treated since the end of the World War and at the same time remind us of the beautiful magnanimity with which they were treated under that President whose spirit is the constant inspiration of our higher selves today. It is not only that April 13th is the second anniversary of Debs' imprisonment. April 14th is the 56th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's death. Lincoln was fifty-six years old, as it happens, when he died, nine years younger than the man who lies in a felon's cell at Atlanta today.

No other country compares with our recent needless savagery in the punishment of opinion. Under espionage act we united up every degree of opposition to war, for violence to the most peaceable disapproval, and then proceeded to punish the peaceable with the same implacability as the violent.

Violent Freed While Idealists Suffer

Indeed, some of the most notorious plotters of violence are out of prisons, either through pardon or through the incompetence of the Department of Justice, while some of the gentlest and most idealistic are still rotting in jail in these piping times of so-called peace.

In the case of Socialists, like Debs, their crime is in continuing the not, in a peaceful way, during the war as if they believed what they had all their lives professed. It must be conceded that they made some saucy remarks about the realty of the idealism being preached at that time.

Sentences of ten years for that kind of so-called crime are unknown in Europe. The treatment during the time in prison has little resemblance to the treatment of real criminals. They are not subject to the ordinary regime, measured, put in prison dress, forced to mix with the actual criminals. They are allowed to visit one another and may get their food from outside.

Barber Gives Recipe for Gray Hair

Mr. A. E. O'Brien, who has been a barber in New York City for many years, made the following statement: "Gray, streaked or faded hair can be immediately made black, brown or light brown, whichever shade you desire, by the use of the following remedy that you can make at home:

"Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extras to buy. Dissolve it in 3 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box. One box will last you for months.

"It is safe, does not rub off, is not sticky or gummy and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."—Advertisement.

Boston Irish Societies Will Pay Tribute to Memory of Erin's Patron Saint Figures who will take prominent parts in various St. Patrick's Day celebrations in Greater Boston tomorrow.

St. Patrick's Day will be observed tomorrow more generally than it has in years past.

Throughout Boston and vicinity the members of the many Irish Catholic organizations, formed for social, fraternal or patriotic purposes, together with their friends, will meet, some at the banquet board, others at various public gatherings.

Among the many organizations which will honor the memory of St. Patrick is the Charitable Irish Society, formed 134 years ago, members of which will meet in Young's Hotel, tomorrow morning, and elect officers for the coming year. The anniversary dinner will be held in the evening at the Hotel Somerset. Arthur W. Dolan will be toastmaster.

Speakers will be Congressman James O'Connor of Louisiana, who will respond to the toast, "The United States of America"; Rev. Dr. John Cavanaugh of the Catholic University, Washington, D. C., on "The Day We Celebrate"; Governor Cox, "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts"; Mayor Peters, "The City of Boston"; General Edward L. Logan, "American Relief in Ireland"; Mayor Sullivan of Worcester, "Ireland's Contribution to America"; President James A. Dorsey, "Our Organization"; Secretary John J. Keenan, "Our Membership Roll."

HOTEL WESTMINSTER BANQUET.

Matthew Cummings will be toastmaster at the banquet of the Boston Central Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom to be held tomorrow night at the Hotel Westminster.

The program arranged follows: Opening address, Matthew Cummings; vocal selection, "The Star Spangled Banner," William R. O'Leary; "Friends of Irish Freedom," Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, National chaplain of the A. O. H.; vocal selection, Margaret Moran of Lynn; "Ireland a Nation," Bishop J. Grattan Mythen of the Episcopal Church, N. Y.; "The Day We Celebrate," Rev. Phillip J. O'Donnell; "The Irish in America," Daniel J. Moran of Lynn, "The State Council F. O. I. F."; vocal selection, Mrs. Frank Appleton; "The Irish Volunteers," Rev. Austin E. Doherty of Cambridge; "America," Edward F. McSweeney.

ROXBURY MEETING.

Rose Croix Council, No. 3331, K. of C., will hold a celebration in the Practical Arts High School, Greenville street, Roxbury, tomorrow night. The orator will be former Mayor James M. Curley, whose subject will be "Ireland's Contribution to America." A musical program has been provided by Worthy Lecturer John Dowd, who has charge of the speaking. Guests will be present from neighboring councils.

Judge Thomas P. Riley of Malden will be the principal speaker at the "Irish Night" of the Ward 13 Tammany Club, in the Municipal building, Vine and Dudley streets, Roxbury.

Members of the thirty-two councils of the Central Council of Irish County Associations will gather in Hibernian Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury. John J. Foley, State vice-president of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, State President John F. Harrigan of the latter organization will be a guest.

Ethan Allen Council of the A. A. R. I. R., will listen to noted speakers in Bloomfield Hall, Dorchester. Thomas F. Murray will speak on the "Life and Times of St. Patrick."

Division No. 20, A. O. H., holds a celebration in Mishawum Hall, City Square, Charlestown. Officials of the order will attend. St. Andrew's Council of the A. A. R. I. R., will hold a celebration in Parkman School Hall, Forest Hills. This evening in Hibernian Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury, the Boston Gaelic School will hold a celebration.

2-ALARM FIRE IN ALLSTON BUILDING

Flames Spread Rapidly In Cleansing Plant and Threaten Gasoline Tanks

Two alarms were sounded early today for fire in the main office of the Priscilla Cleansing Company, No. 245 Cambridge street, Allston. The flames spread rapidly to the store of H. M. Graves at No. 271 Cambridge street and threatened other nearby buildings before the firemen were able to gain control.

The blaze was discovered burning on the first floor of the cleansing firm and spread to the factory on the second floor before the apparatus arrived. The second alarm was sent in shortly after the first engines arrived when the district chief learned of several gasoline tanks in the vicinity of the burning building.

ARREST SOLDIER FOR ROBBING WOMAN

Charged with robbing Mrs. Anna Lucas of No. 43 Louis street, Chelsea, of $82 worth of property, John Chestnut, twenty-eight years old, a private in the Machine Gun Company, 58th Infantry, of Camp Devens, was arrested in the North End by Chelsea policemen. He was also charged with carrying a loaded revolver. He is alleged to have forced his way into the woman's room, and robbed her at the point of a gun.

New Haven, March 16.—Rev. Dr. Newman Smyth has tendered his resignation as senior fellow of the Yale corporation. The latter has deferred action until June.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

HOW I CURED MY CATARRH

TOLD IN A SIMPLE WAY

Without Apparatus, Inhalers, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity. HEALS DAY AND NIGHT

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different; no lotion, spray or sickening drug; nothing to smoke or inhale; no confinement in the home; something healthful. You do not have to wait and linger and pay out a lot of money. I will gladly tell you how. I am not a doctor, but I so cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic. I am free. You can be free. My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my head. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me secretly.

But I found a cure and I am sure so tell thousands of other sufferers that CAMPHOROLE cured me of catarrh of nose and throat.—Mrs. M. Anderson, Pleasantville Terrace, N. J.

A MOTHER'S EXPERIENCE

West Buxton (Me.)—Read of Mrs. Arthur Campbell's painful experience. "I am a mother of five children. My little girl two years old was so sick with fever she lay just as if she were dead for two weeks. I started giving her Dr. True's Elixir and she began to gain at once. Now I would not be without it. I feel very grateful to you."

No doubt this child had some stomach trouble due to worms. Scores of children have worms and their mothers know not the trouble.

Common symptoms of worms: Deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, itching of the nose and rectum, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points on the tongue, slow fever.

Dr. True's Elixir has been faithful in its duties as a family Laxative and Worm Expeller since 1881.—Adv.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

HAVE YOU seen Margaret Severn dance with the famous Benda masks in the "Greenwich Village Follies?"

Seeing them, has it occurred to you what effect they would have in pictures?

These masks, some grotesque, some delicate, others colorful, are not really new in the theatre. Centuries ago they were used by the first players, who later discarded them for the more natural effects of make-up. Since then the masks, one a scowling, grimacing face for tragedy and the other a laughing, joyous one for comedy, have stood for acting and the drama. They have been used as illustrations on playbills, articles and stories.

But it was W. T. Benda, the illustrator, who thought to perfect them. He made his collections only as a hobby, but they attracted attention and it was then decided to revive them for the stage.

Margaret Severn, who is eminently fitted to use these masks in her dancing, since she has made a study of them and of their effects on her work and on her audiences, had some interesting ideas about them in connection with movies when I talked with her the other day.

FOR DeMILLE OR GRIFFITH.

"Of course, I realize," she said, "that they would be worse than useless if used by the leading players, unless for comedy or grotesque effects, for they are stiff and hide the individuality of the face. The human eye, which is the very window of the mind, is necessary to portray the change of emotion, and with this covering it's impossible.

"But, on the other hand, how picturesque these masks are, and how striking. They have value as symbols and characterizations. Such an artist as Cecil DeMille, for instance, or David Wark Griffith could use them to advantage in certain scenes, in visions, dreams, or some of the lavish entertainments and parties they bring into their stories.

"They are made to represent a deep feeling as well as some type of person. The Japanese Princess mask, aside from its delicate beauty, gives a sense of the quiet, the repose of that people. The "Silly Doll" mask actually breathes the idiocy and imbecility of the empty-face, pretty simpleton. How effective they might be made in films—as a novelty, of course. As a regular features, they would soon lose their strength."

THE FILM SCOUT.

THE MOVIE producers keep their work and plans as secret as the army heads do when they're on the battlefield. And like the army heads, the producers have scouts and spies to try to find out what the others are doing and, if possible, get ahead of them.

These film scouts worm their way into various studios, sometimes as visitors, "extras," or workmen and get an idea of what the pictures will be. But even though they work in several scenes they can't always get any sort of idea of what the finished picture may be like, as the scenes are not "shot" in sequence but the various locations are taken one at a time regardless of whether they are continuous or not.

A good story is told about a scout who tried to find out what Charlie Chaplin was doing when he was filming "The Kid." He got into the studio and even had a glance at the manuscript. "I hear you got a line on what Chaplin's doing," a friend said to the rival producer.

"I did not," he grunted. "The scout we sent says he even read the script, but every time he tries to tell it to us he laughs so hard we can't understand a word he says."

CAMERA CLICKS.

POLA NEGRI'S second film after "Passion," will be released in this country on May 16. It will be another version of "Carmen," called "Gypsy Blood."

ROLAND YOUNG, the comedian who has made his mark in farce, has signed up to make pictures under the direction of Guida Bergere, who is Mrs. George Fitzmorris in private life. Miss Bergere will not only write scenarios after this but will direct her own productions.

GERALDINE FARRAR will sail for Europe in May with her husband, Lou Tellegen. After this "belated honeymoon," as Miss Farrar calls it, she will return to the screen and make several features.

WILLIE HOWARD, star of the Winter Garden in New York, has wired little Jackie Coogan's father, that he has just finished writing a song about "The Kid," which he will sing in the show.

WHARTON JAMES, author, director and actor, has just refused an offer of $1,000 for his Scotch collie, "Highland Laddie." Both Mr. James and "Laddie" will be seen in "The Call of the Wild," taken from Jack London's famous story.

APPEARING in motion pictures is a Winter pastime for Pasadena visitors from the East. In the filming of the famous riding scenes last week in Pasadena Glen for Oliver Morosco's "The Half Breed," Mrs. Chapman, hostess of Hotel Green, couldn't care for the crowds that wanted to be "extras."

STAGE AND SCREEN.

DOES THE screen follow the stage? It's been said that when a cycle of Oriental plays are given on the stage, the films immediately follow suit with the same sort of story.

"Aphrodite," "Mecca" and "Afgar" on the stage have brought such films as "Queen of Sheba," a film version of "Kismet," and the forthcoming one of "Aphrodite"; the present vogue for Spanish plays on the stage has brought "The World and His Wife," starring Alma Rubens, the June Caprice and George B. Seitz serial, "Rogues and Romances," Metro's "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and Norma Talmage's film version of "The Passion Flower."

During the past season this historical character has held the centre of the legitimate stage. New York has had "Abraham Lincoln," Dixon's "Man of the People," another Lincoln play, "Deburau," and John Drinkwater is working on "Robert E. Lee" and "Mary, Queen of Scots," which he has retitled "Mary Stuart." Europe has sent us "Passion," giving the story of Madame DuBarry and Belasko has filmed a Lincoln story, "The Highest Law," featuring Ralph Ince.

Now we hear that Belasco is making plans to film the life of Lucrezia Borgia, the colorful Italian of the Renaissance period who had more than a slight liking for poisoning. Such an interesting complex study of human nature, a bit distorted, it's true, should offer great scope for the right producer and director. But let only the best attempt it, or it would become slapstick comedy.

PRISCILLA DEAN SAYS—

"DON'T WASTE your time or money on any studio which advertises a sure entrance into a screen career," she said the other day. "You don't need to spend a cent with the fake music schools to get into pictures if you are the right type. The director is looking for you just as much as you are looking for him.

"The only way to get in is to be persistent and to present yourself at the studio every day, accepting 'extra' work gladly. That's the way I made my start in pictures.

"And remember, apply while you're still young—sixteen, seventeen or eighteen years old," she concluded. "The camera makes you look older and the life of a motion picture star is short at best. But, whatever you do, don't be taken in by those 'movie schools'—all you'll get out of it is experience."

U. S. BODY OF 100 INDICT BRITISH RULE OF BLOOD

Withering Denunciation of Irish Policy Concludes Commission's Findings

Washington, March 16.—The report of the American commission of inquiry on conditions in Ireland, soon to be placed in the hands of the printer, contains one of the strongest indictments of British terrorism in Ireland that has ever been printed.

The report is a bulky volume of about 500 pages. It reviews evidence given by scores of witnesses in a series of hearings extending over several months, and concludes with a withering denunciation of British police in Ireland and the arguments that have been used to defend this policy.

In discussing the report, Senator George Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, a member of the commission, said today:

"The report indicts the British particularly on two counts, which in my opinion, makes their position both legally and morally indefensible. The first is that they deny a defenseless people the protection of the British civil law, under which they are supposed to be governed, and also deny them the limited protection of international law, which every civilized nation is supposed to recognize in dealings with belligerents.

"Under cover of this denial of all law where dealings with the Irish are concerned, and which is defended by the flimsiest of pretexts, the Irish people have been subjected to a reign of terrorism such as has never been seen before in any land supposed to enjoy the benefits of civilization.

"This campaign of terror is not sanctioned by the laws of any nation, or by the law of nations that applies between warring communities.

"By the evidence of numerous and competent eye-witnesses, it has been shown that this terror, intended to intimidate and break the spirit of the Irish people where it could never gain a hold by moral force, includes the shooting of unarmed and helpless civilians, men, women and children, indiscriminate looting, burning, and other forms of terrorism, such as the killing of defenceless prisoners of war.

"One of the most recent, and to my mind most despicable forms which this violation of the laws of warfare has taken, is using civilians and prisoners as a screen for the operation of troops, such as taking them along as hostages in motor lorries filled with armed men."

It is understood that a special report on the religious aspect of the Irish question will be made by the non-Catholic members of the commission, and will show that the religious issue is a wholly false one, raised by those who are seeking in every way to discredit the Republican movement in Ireland.

To Describe Sierras to Brighton Club

William H. Elliott of Brighton, a member of the Sierra Club, will give a stereopticon lecture on "Grand Views of the High Sierras" in the Brightheimstons Clubhouse Friday evening, March 18, at 8 o'clock. Leverett B. Merrill will sing.

The proceeds are for the new building fund of the Brighton Congregational Church, recently destroyed by fire.

Mr. Elliott is captain of a team to raise funds for this purpose. Other members are Captain Almsley C. Armstrong, L. Goldwaith Smith, Frank H. Sargent and George A. Marsh.

CRASH BLOCKS SUBWAY AT BOWDOIN SQUARE

Traffic was tied up in the Subway, at Bowdoin square, when a collision occurred between two cars, one of which was empty and the other having thirty passengers aboard. Nobody was seriously injured, it was stated.

A car bound from Cambridge to Jeffries Point, East Boston, struck the empty car, which was taking the loop at the station. During the tieup, cars from the East Boston end of the tunnel were sent back over a crossover at Devonshire street and cars bound in from Cambridge were run over the surface to Scollay square.

HELD FOR ROBBERY OF AGED JUNKMAN

Manchester, N. H., March 16.—Sidney Babineau was arrested in Goodsville, charged with the assault and robbery of Simon Bean, an aged Franklin junk dealer, in that town. Bean was robbed of a large sum of money while driving his team over a lonely road, and is in the hospital in a serious condition. He accused Babineau of the crime.

Packers Assure Meats If Strike Comes

Chicago, March 16.—Confidence in the ability of the packers to maintain an uninterrupted supply of fresh meats despite any development that may come in the wage controversy was expressed today in a statement issued by J. Ogden Armour.

Armour expressly warned retail dealers against stocking up with fresh meats in anticipation of a strike. Such a policy he declared would result in an artificial shortage and force prices up without benefiting any one.

General Offices

WAUKEGAN, ILL.

December 15, 1920.

Mr. George Hartford,
Manager National Advertising,
Chicago Herald and Examiner,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Hartford:

Three weeks ago, when Mr. Olsen and I walked into your office, we had $30,000 worth of ironing boards on hand and our plant was closed down.

Last Tuesday, just 18 days after we signed our contract with you and began our distribution campaign under your direction, our entire stock had been sold, and we reopened our factory. Today, we are running at full capacity.

This is such a remarkable tribute to the efficiency of your organization and to the value of advertising in the Herald and Examiner that I am impelled to tell you that I should consider it a privilege to discuss my experience with any prospective advertisers you might care to refer to me.

Our wonderful success in Chicago has shown us that we made a mistake when we used national magazines, and convinced us that the only sane sales policy is to confine advertising to local newspapers until distribution has been secured, and then to reinforce newspaper advertising with national publicity.

You are at liberty to use this letter in any way you see fit.

RID-JID PRODUCTS CORPORATION,

President.

CHK:N

There's Just This to Add—

What the Herald and Examiner has done for this manufacturer and many others coming into the Chicago market, it can do for you.

If you manufacture a product of merit which enables the dealer to make a fair margin of profit, the plan which the Merchandising Department of the Herald and Examiner has developed and perfected will prove of unusual value to you.

It will enable you to secure dealer distribution before a line of advertising is published; it will win for you the dealer's whole-hearted co-operation; it will secure this distribution and dealer co-operation at but small expense. Finally, with an advertising campaign large enough to awaken consumer demand, the Chicago market—rich beyond compare—will give you a large volume of business, and an ever-increasing volume each succeeding year.

We shall be glad to send you an exposition of the Merchandising Plan of the Herald and Examiner. A request for it involves no obligation. Write today.

The Director of Movie Player Test Headquarters reports that it will be at least three weeks before he will be ready to announce the names of 218 readers of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser who are to divide the $5,000 offered to New Englanders who should identify the largest percentages of 120 photographs of Movie Players.

"I can understand," Mr. Director says, "that participants in the former Test want to know the result as soon as possible. Tell them we are working hard with that desire in mind. But, please ask them to remember that we had four or five million identifications to check and, while we regard speed as essential, we look upon accuracy as even more essential.

"Every single identification that came to us is being examined. We are not examining—but will preserve, however—those parcels which came to us without sufficient postage or after the expiration of the time limit. We paid all the postage due on these packages but, regardless of that fact and in fairness to those who paid their own postage, they are not being considered."

Picture No. 13, in the Movie Play TITLE Test, will be found today on the Picture Page. With it is the usual List of Titles. In this list is the correct title of the Picture.

You know, of course, that this NEW Test consists of sixty pictures, each of which illustrates the TITLE of a motion picture play which has been produced in the United States.

Two hundred and nineteen awards, amounting to $5,000, will be paid to readers of the associated newspapers—Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser—who send in the largest percentages of correct titles to the sixty pictures. This is the Eighteenth Day of the Test. Titles are NOT to be sent in before the end of the Test. The awards will be as follows:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	200
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	100
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
TOTAL	$5,000

A letter from a prominent Boston business man, on behalf of his niece who lives in the country, leads the Title Test Editor to emphasize once more that the Test Pictures have absolutely no connection with the "movies" beyond illustrating movie TITLES.

The writer means, by this, that the pictures do not illustrate SCENES in movie plays.

The Test might be summed up like this: Here is a picture. What is the title of this picture? Its title is the title of a motion-picture play. Where shall I find that title? In the List of Titles printed below the picture. But there are many titled plays. Certainly, there you have the "Test." One of these titles, however, fits this picture better than any other title in the list. Which is that title?

In other words, one may dismiss the movies—as such—entirely from his mind and consider merely (1) the Test Picture and (2) the List of Titles.

Those of our correspondents who have described the Test as "easy," up to the present time, are right—up to the present time! Naturally, it will NOT be easy all the way to the end. The Test Editor would not purposely mislead one of you. If the Test already has proved too much for you, you probably will do well to sit back and for the rest of the journey be lookers-on.

An announcement of interest to every participant, and to all who may want to enter the Test before it is much further advanced, will be made in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Please do not misunderstand this paragraph. The Sunday Advertiser will print Test Picture No. 14 will NOT print Back Picture. The best way to keep in touch with the Test from day to day is to PLACE A STANDING ORDER FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN AND THE BOSTON SUNDAY ADVERTISER WITH YOUR REGULAR NEWSDEALER.

This Test Picture No. 13 will be printed in tomorrow's Boston American. If you are still of a mind to enter the $1,000, $750, $500, $400, $300, $200, $150, $100, $50, or one of the 330 lesser awards be sure to get the papers with the Test Picture. That will be the ONLY way to obtain the full-size pictures.

Several participants have written to the Title Test Editor about various phases of the Test. He will try to answer them:

F. A. S., Providence—Names are mostly picture theatre you like. If I were to paste them in a book I should use only one side of a sheet. You might put any number of pictures on one page, but paste none on the back of that page. Just as if you were writing for publication. Use but one side of a sheet of paper.

Hancock, Quincy, Mass.—In your position I should leave the theatre line blank. No objection to the pencil, if you are likely to change your mind about its being so "easy."

Buddha, New Bedford—I have taken up the matter with the powers that be. Hope to get action within a few days. You know how these things are likely to drag. Thank you for the helpful letter.

Wakefield—Glad to hear from you. One set of answers for one person.

Movie, Back Bay—It will be all of three weeks before they are done checking the Movie Player identifications. Forty thousand parcels means 4,800,000 separate pictures. Your temporary absence would make no difference. What's yours is yours, you know. Hope you have an enjoyable trip.

N. B., Springfield—Pencil or ink and do not worry. Good luck to you.

A Maine Reader, Presque Isle—I see nothing in the arrangement which can be construed as unfair. Let them all in, old top.

J. D. H., Pittsfield, Mass.—I think that it may be that the edition you saw is the earliest of all and carries the Test Picture of the previous day. All the pictures come to you eventually, because at the end of the Test you will get two in one day. Everything clear?

Mrs. F. H. C., South Boston—I imagine you will not have much trouble making up your mind about it. Seeing what those two crooks are doing it shouldn't take very long. Still, I am grateful for your letter. The same and should not have been there. One of our young men is supposed to see that this does not happen. Its must have been asleep at the switch. Will try to see that it doesn't occur again.

Four South End Readers—Please see answer to Buddha of New Bedford. Thank you.

J. S., Providence—The error referred to appeared in a brief introduction that day to the List of Operating Theatres. You were quite right. Under the circumstances I felt it to be only fair to tell everybody that the title to No. 5 is "It's A Bear."

LYNCH NEGRO CHARGED WITH ATTACK ON WOMAN

Texarkana, Texas, March 16. — A mob of about 2,000 persons dragged Brownie Tuttle, a negro, from the Hope City jail and hanged him near the place of his captivity. He was charged with attacking a white woman, near Hope, Ark.

Louis Campagna Had Taken Vivian Bressel to Argentine

New York, March 16.—Louis Campagna, a wealthy wholesale fruit dealer of this city, shot and killed Miss Vivian Bressel, and then committed suicide on the liner Vasari, bound to its port from Argentine, according to radio-grams relayed here from the late Department at Washington.

The poor woman, according to the advices, was traveling with Campagna as his wife. The couple started from New York well supplied with funds, taking with them a limousine in which they planned to tour Argentina.

On the trip back, when four days out from Barbadoes, on March 13, Campagna shot Miss Bressel and then killed himself in the cabin occupied by the couple, according to the radio.

It is said that creditors of the fruit merchant took part in proceedings to prevent his landing on foreign soil. Governor Charles W. Gates, failed in

MOTHER'S BLOOD FAILS TO SAVE HER INFANT

St. Albans, Vt., March 16. — Mrs. Paul Gates, daughter-in-law of Ex-Governor Charles W. Gates, failed in her efforts to save the life of her three-day-old son. Following a hemorrhage it was found necessary to transfuse blood to keep the infant alive, and the mother gave up her blood. Dr. C. K. Johnson of Burlington performed the transfusion operation. The child died shortly after.

MOTHER BRINGS SLAIN GIRL'S BODY HOME

Victim of Jersey "Ripper" to Be Buried at Arlington Tomorrow

The mutilated body of Mrs. Edith Wilson, formerly of Somerville, who was murdered near her home in Perth Amboy, N. J., arrived in Arlington today, accompanied by the murdered girl's mother.

A sister, Mrs. John Easton of Norfolk road, Arlington, and her husband have made all the arrangements for the burial, which will take place tomorrow at the Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

A huge crowd packed the streets before the slain woman's home in Perth Amboy at the funeral services held there. The house also was filled with mourners, among whom were members of the choirs of the Methodist and Baptist churches of Perth Amboy, where Mrs. Wilson had officiated as organist. The pastors of both churches paid tribute to the dead woman's character and personality.

Mrs. Wilson was a daughter of the late Captain Alvan Marshall, for a score of years engaged in the coast shipping trade. Ten years ago he retired and with his family went to Perth Amboy to live. His daughter, Edith, who had been forced to leave the Somerville High School because of her health, returned to Boston and was graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music.

After going back to Perth Amboy she gave music lessons and acted as organist, first in the Baptist and later in the Methodist churches there.

George Washington Knight, the negro who has confessed to killing her while crazed by gin, is being held under close guard at the New Brunswick, N. J., jail for fear of mob violence. Mrs. Sara Strum, from whom the negro declared he had purchased the gin on the night of the murder, has surrendered to the authorities and is being held in $5,000 bail on a charge of selling liquor illegally.

ASKS NEW TRIAL FOR GEORGE L. WARE

A motion for a new trial for George L. Ware, charged with using the mails to defraud, is under consideration by Judge Hale in Federal Court, following a hearing. Ware was found guilty several weeks ago by a jury. The mails were used illegally, it was charged, in connection with the promoting of stocks of the Mutual Divide. Robert Ryder, counsel for Ware, filed the motion in the U. S. District Court in behalf of Ware, asking that the verdict be not aside.

BROCKTON GIRL OF 13 MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING

Brockton, March 16—Mary G. Alberts, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Alberts of No. 42 Franklin street, has been missing from her home since last Sunday and the police have been asked by her parents to find her. The last seen of her was late Sunday afternoon on Warren avenue. At that time she wore a blue serge suit, blue blouse, black coat and cape and brown shoes and stockings. She is dark-complexioned and has a scar on the right cheek.

PROFESSOR PICKERING WILL GO TO ENGLAND

William H. Pickering, assistant professor of Astronomy at Harvard and head of the Mandeville Station in Jamaica, a branch of the Harvard Astronomical Observatory, has been granted one year's leave of absence by the corporation of the university.

It is understood that Professor Pickering, who has been engaged in studies of the moon and Mars, will go in April to England, where he is to read to the Royal Astronomical Society a paper upon the moon. He may also make a study of some of the volcanic craters in the neighborhood of the Mediterranean Sea.

BANKRUPTCY CLAIMS AGAINST MARKET MEN

A petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States Court today against Ira and Samuel Levy, proprietors of a market in Boston. The claims, which aggregate $987.20, were filed by the Boston Beef Company, with a bill of $314.70; the Lewis & Fox Company, $130, and the National Beef Company of Boston, $362.59. All were for merchandise.

There's Authority for these Statements

From physicians, dietitians and nutrition experts the nation over come enthusiastic statements attesting the health-importance of prunes in the daily diet. If you would see how essential prunes are to your physical well-being, read these:

"I believe I am conferring a lasting favor on my patients in urging a more liberal use of such natural food-medicines as prunes. They are rich in nutritive, laxative and mineral elements. This much is certain: there would be less indigestion, less constipation and the ills that follow in their train, if people ate more prunes."
—from an eminent medical consultant whose advice on diet has helped countless patients to better health and longer life

"The craving for sweets, exhibited in most children and many adults, is a natural demand on the part of the system for a needed food. In using dried fruit [such as prunes] we obtain not only the nutritive value of the sugar, but whatever other hygienic or medicinal value they may have by virtue of the salts and organic acids found in them. Remember, too, that prunes especially are rich in tonic iron."
—from a nutrition expert whose investigations have won for him a nation-wide reputation as an authority on food values —and here, if you will, are two more enthusiastic statements that show what domestic scientists, chefs and culinary experts think of prunes—the finest, most versatile and most economical of all fruit-foods. Read them and judge for yourself:

"Whether used by themselves instead of fresh or preserved fruit, or as the basis of wondrous desserts, pastry and other dishes, prunes offer a tasteful and economical way of securing variety in the daily fare. The food value of a pound of dried fruit is, of course, much greater than the same quantity of fresh fruit. And, just now, when economy is such a factor to the housewife, the high food value of prunes places them among the reasonable [and always seasonable] articles of diet."
—from a nationally-known domestic scientist to whom thousands of housewives look for practical help and kitchen-guidance

"It is high time that prunes came in for their just deserts." Prunes will occupy a more important place on hotel menus from now on—and I, for one, am glad of it. They are a good, natural food, to begin with; easy to handle in the kitchen, and adaptable to a wide range of uses."
—from a chef whose culinary genius is responsible for many toothsome, wholesome dishes now famous in America and abroad

NEW HAVEN IS WEAK IN BOSTON

Local Market Quiet and Irregular in Forenoon; Little Life to Curb Trading

The Boston market had a very dull opening and many issues were unchanged on first transactions. The balances were about evenly divided between gains and losses. The list continued to show irregularity in price movement during the morning. Trading was of small volume and the market was featureless. New Haven was weak, showing as large a loss here as in New York during the first hour. This was on a few transactions. Packing issues were quoted as a class. Coppers were as dull as ever. But they seemed fairly firm. Calumet & Hecla advanced five points on one sale. United Fruit advanced a point. United Fruit sold off a quarter, but quickly recovered.

Small gains were made by American Telephone, Boston Elevated, Mass. Consolidated, Old Dominion, Libby, Davis Daly and Gray & Davis. Fractional losses were sustained by Greenfield Tap, Eastern Manufacturing, Beacon Chocolate and Utah Consolidated.

CURB WAS IRREGULAR.

The Curb market had a dull opening and stayed quiet throughout the forenoon. It presented nothing likely to inspire interest. Price changes were small as a rule and most issues figured in but few transactions. The price movement was mixed, but most stocks were up. Leaders were Boston & Montana and Verde Mines.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was up 1 cent at 69 cents, Verde Mines 2 cents at 24 cents and United Verde Extension 1 at 26⅝. Ophir had recovered an opening loss and Crystal had lost an early gain.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company has declared its regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., payable March 31 to stock of record March 19.

Donald S. Ferguson, formerly with National City Co., and Edward H. Ogilvie, formerly with Iselin & Co., have become associated with W. J. Baker & Co.

The dividend of $1.50 a share declared on February 9 by the New England Oil Company to date April 1 to stock of record March 19, requires $300,000 and leaves a surplus of $1,000,000.

The H. V. Greene Company has notified the Commissioner of Corporations of an increase in capital from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 through the issuance of 100,000 additional shares of second preferred of $10 par and 100,000 additional shares of common of $1 par.

After replacing to the depth of 4,550 feet the Southwestern Miami Development Company has discontinued work and intends to instal a pump which should increase the flow of oil from the south end of the property from 60 barrels to 100 a day.

The Boston office of Lee, Higginson has been consolidated with the Arthur W. Cutler Co., at No. 19 Congress street. During his forty-five years of experience the Boston (ial) district Mr. Heathfield has been with Markietti, Lee & Co., Boston and Maine Depot & Trust Co., in 1906-1909 he was president of the Mark Cross Association and he is now a director of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union, the Y. M. C. A. and Aged Men. He is also secretary and trustee of the Mass-Insanity Homeopathic Hospital.

BEAR COVERING HELPS THE MARKET

Investment Buying Said to Be a Factor; Rails and Motors Show Strength

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, having reacted somewhat in the second hour. Gains predominated, however, at the end of the morning. Rails and motors showed strength and most of the weakness was in individual issues, including Atlantic Gulf, New Haven and General Asphalt. The market was active, first hour transactions approximating 250,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange ruled higher, demand sterling opening at $3.90¾.

Among strongest stocks were Ajax Rubber, Inspiration, California Petroleum and Studebaker. The latter's forecast they were up from two to about three points. Mail by which they made below their highest. Covering by bears was the main reason for market strength, according to traders.

UP AT THE OPENING.

Buying orders accumulated overnight in sufficient volume to cause higher prices at the opening and for a time the advance was held in check to some extent by profit taking the market had not upward at well sustained strong during the first hour. Investment buying has been resumed, it is reported. There is said to be considerable absorption to provide support for stocks which appeal to small investors. Gains were small as a rule and losses were comparatively few. Atlantic Gulf continued under pressure, it receding more than two points before mid-morning. New Haven was the weakest rail, it losing down 1¾ in the first hour. Carriers moved upward as a rule. Oils showed the least group resistance to the bear sentiment. The latter was not aggressive, however, short covering was on an extensive scale yesterday and was resumed this morning. Studebaker advanced more than a point early in the session. California Petroleum was active and made a substantial gain. Sears-Roebuck began with two-points advance. General Asphalt had a narrow range for this issue and held off.

BIG BORROWING DEMAND.

A local financial publication prints a statement from New York reading: "The borrowing demand was summarized an unwieldy volume. On Monday the money crowd was augmented after 4 o'clock but last night wound up a little earlier because before that time the supply of stocks had been entirely exhausted and there was no necessity for intending borrowers to wait around for the loans to be delivered for delivery today. United Fruit loaned at 7 per cent. Demand was an extremely large demand for many other stocks including Atlantic Gulf, Baldwin, Beth. Steel, Inspiration, General Asphalt and Studebaker."

Copper Curtailment

The extent of the curtailment of copper production with the metal offered at the low as 13 cents a pound is shown by the fact that the output for January and February this year was 130,152,226 pounds, as compared with production by them aggregating 168,724,477 pounds during the corresponding 1920 period.

New England Is Thrifty

The thrift of New England is shown by statistics concerning the 410 savings banks in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut. On January 1 this year they had deposits aggregating $2,112,637,121, an increase of $147,-995,466, or 7.53 per cent. in a year.

Commerce Is Improving

Increased car loadings are significant of an improvement in this country's business, and it is believed that the week ending with March 5 loadings totalled 712,522 cars, an increase of 54,000 over the preceding week, which included holiday. February 22, and a gain of 17,000 over the week of February 15.

The White Oil Corporation recently acquired a half interest in 270 acres in the Elreno oil field, Arkansas, and it is believed that its new financing will consist of long term issues.

The Parish & Bingham Corporation reports for 1920 an operating loss of $164,000 before charges and various reserves of $357,-

The Island Creek Coal Company declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on preferred, dividend of $1.50 a share on common, both payable April 1 to holders of record March 25.

JACK THOMAS TO BATTLE BILLY CARNEY

Boys Will Mingle in 12-Round Main Bout at Commonwealth A. A. Saturday Night

By JACK CONWAY.

Jack Thomas, Canadian welterweight champion, has been signed to meet Billy Carney of New Bedford in a ten-round bout at the Commonwealth A. A. Saturday night. Thomas recently made a sensation in his Boston debut by stopping Shaver O'Brien of South Boston in two rounds.

Carney is a rugged, two-handed fighter and is confident that he will be able to take anything the Canadian has to offer and then smash his way to a decisive victory.

Jimmy Donahue of the South End will mingle with Eddie Lowry of Malden in the semi-final of eight rounds. Mickey Monigan of Ireland and Louis Lynch of East Boston will also box eight rounds.

TILDEN TEAMED UP WITH HARVARD CAPTAIN

Bill Tilden, recognised as the world's champion tennis player, teamed up with Captain de Turenne of Harvard and opposed to Norris Williams, former national champion, and Nevin Sawyer, another Harvard player, will meet at doubles tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the Longwood Covered Courts. Tilden will speak of his experiences with the Davis Cup team in the evening at the Harvard Union.

Wilson Feels Sure of Defeating O'Dowd

By JOHNNY WILSON
(Middleweight champion of the world.)

I am fit! I shall win!

This is my message to the boxing fans of Boston and New England on the eve of my fifteen-round title battle with Mike O'Dowd in Madison Square Garden, New York.

You will notice that I didn't say anything about what I would say or do if defeated. This is because I am not going to lose. I have not even considered such a possibility, as I intend to smash my way to a glorious victory.

No battle was ever won by a man who didn't have confidence in himself. This is the first essential to success in athletics as well as in business.

I planned to do a little light exercise today. I don't want my muscles to get stiff. By night I shall be in New York. I shall go to some quiet place and rest up for the battle. A ring champion never showed to advantage by spending the night before a contest in the company of his friends. They are no magic for your success that they are liable to make you nervous by asking numerous questions and by giving advice.

Doesn't Care to Talk as Fight Draws Near

I welcome any questions up to a week before a big bout. I am also willing to listen to the advice of friends. But as the date of an important contest approaches one would become nervous and irritable if queried by too many people. And in the case of my former Harvard player, will meet at doubles tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the Longwood Covered Courts. Tilden will speak of his experiences with the Davis Cup team in the evening at the Harvard Union.

Made 7-5 Favorite to Beat O'Dowd

I notice that New York fans have awakened to a realization of the fact that I am a fighting champion. Odds of 7 to 5 on Tuesday's small talk about having been robbed of his title I have been installed a 7 to 5 favorite by many persons who follow the ring game closely realize that I possess the necessary ability to successfully defend my championship.

I am under the required weight of 160 pounds. I expect to scale at 158 to 159 pounds when I enter the ring tonight. Tomorrow morning I will find me at my best and prepared to defend the fifteen rounds at a terrific clip

I expect O'Dowd to be the aggressor from the opening gong as usual. Mike has always been one of those fellows who would take a chance in an effort to get over the big punch. This will be more noticeable than is ordinarily the case tonight as he hates me because I won his title from me.

O'Dowd will make an effort to knock me out in the early part of the fight, figuring that I will be fresh. By the time the contest has gone the six rounds O'Dowd will begin to tire, as was the case when he fought me in Boston. I shall have saved all energy possible and sh

Having annexed the opening game in the semi-final series for the national hockey championship by vanquishing the B. A. A., 4 to 2, Cleveland's heady hockey sextet is preparing to make a clean sweep of the Boston games at the Arena tonight.

Whether Cleveland can do so is another matter, for, despite the absence of both Uniform outer defence regulars—Stubbs and O'Sullivan—Cleveland was a beaten team up to within three minutes of the close of the regular playing session, and would have remained a beaten team had the Unicorns played sensible hockey.

The Cleveland team showed itself to be extremely wise in hockey lore. Its men, who are excellent stick handlers but not very speedy skaters, played hockey after the manner Harvard plays football. For the most part they allowed their opponents to take the offensive, contenting themselves with forming a double line of defence until a break came. Then they hastily assumed a two, three or four-man attack, which generally wound up with a busy session for the opposing goalie.

Two perfectly delightful breaks came to them in their opening clash with the B. A. A. The first developed when but three minutes of regular playing time remained. At that point in the game the B. A. A. led, 2 to 1, and had the latter team attended strictly to its defensive play, a B. A. A. victory would have resulted. Instead of solidifying their defence, however, the entire B. A. A. team stayed attacking tactics, and Holman and Stewart of the Clevelanad team promptly took advantage of the situation and on the latter's shot tied the score.

This necessitated an extra period, and the second break favoring Cleveland came when Ingalls was ruled off the ice for illegal checking, thereby reducing the local sextet to a quintet. During this period of unequal opposition Cleveland tallied two more counters and won the game, 4 to 2.

KNOCKOUTS FEATURE IN APOLLO A. C. RING

Three knockouts occurred in the amateur program staged by the Apollo A. C. in the rooms of the Commercial A. C. Frank O'Brien of Charlestown knocked out Charley Donovan of South Boston in the 108-pound class final. Vincent Doussis of Lynn won the 125- by knocking out Al Muzzi, North End, in the third, and Jack Conroy knocked out George Allen of Melrose in the 145 finals.

SCRUB BATTLES NOW IN ORDER FOR BRAVES

Daily Batting Practice Sessions Having Beneficial Results for All at Camp

By NICK FLATLEY

Galveston, Tex., March 16.—The preliminary stages of the Braves' practice season have passed, and the squad was split up today and scrub games started. There will be some sort of a contest every day now until the team gets back to Boston early in April for the opening of the well-known season.

Torrid weather has now arrived at the training camp and business another of those Northern that slowed things up last week comes in off the Gulf, the Braves will surely leave Texas in physical trim to tackle any and all opposition.

We might mention here that in quite a few seasons around training camps, we have never seen a squad that apparently enjoyed work so much or was more willing to hustle. If Manager Mitchell never does another thing, he can at least boast of getting together a team that has plenty of pepper and ambition.

Boeckel Expected to Sign Soon

Tony Boeckel, the regular third baseman, hasn't signed a contract, but is among those present, and practicing daily with the rest, which shows that he hasn't any doubts about reaching a satisfactory agreement when it comes to a showdown.

Manager Mitchell is evidently a great believer in batting practice for the Brave players in their first couple of days here, got in more swatting than has been the custom for them for quite sometime. The batting cage is out morning and afternoon, the pitchers get their warming up throwing to batters instead of catchers and nearly a ball-player has kick coming about the lack of swings.

Hitting Practice Adds to Era of Good Feeling

Any real ball player would rather hit than eat, which is saying several mouthfuls, and the good spirit and harmony that prevail are doubtless due in great part to this section of the Mitchell system. The veterans, of course, always do thump the agate, but many a good rookie has been passed up in the Spring because he wasn't allowed in there at the plate, while the pitchers were getting their arms in trim and the batting eye was improving.

"A Man's as Old as-----"

Let all middle-aged, slightly bald, shop-worn men chuck out their chests, and put new spring in their steps.

Stanislas Zbyszko, portly Pole, with the corrugations of all of forty-six years in his features, and along the back of his neck, with no more hair on his head than a billiard ball, snaps up Joe Stecher, young, and sprightly, and slams him to the floor.

It is a triumph for the PAST FORTIES.

Corn-fed, flushed with youth, and as powerful as a young mountain lion, Stecher was regarded as almost a "sure-thing" against the old Pole with the sneezable name.

Once a mighty wrestler, Zbyszko had reached an age where it is considered impossible to train into the physical condition necessary for a long, hard grappling match. Yet after two hours and sixteen minutes of struggling, it was Zbyszko who had the strength left to take his strong youthful opponent and pin his broad shoulders to the mat.

Yes, it is an occasion for the middle-aged to let out three rousing cheers. These young fellows are getting too fresh, anyway, tramping on people's heels.

And if Zbyszko is not enough, the PAST FORTIES give you Hon. Jack Twin Sullivan, forty odd years old, but able to smack young chaps on their jaws, and lay them out for the count.

CADDOCK TEMPORARILY BLIND IN RIGHT EYE

Walnut, Iowa, March 16.—Earl Caddock, former heavyweight wrestling champion, has suffered an injury to his right eye that has left him temporarily half blind. Caddock stated that Strangler Lewis's head lock was in way the cause of the injury.

B. C. High Ball Team Has Open Dates

With more than fifty candidates answering the first call for players, Coach Leo Daley of Boston College High school is looking forward to a successful season on the diamond. Manager Fleming has three open dates on his schedule and would like to arrange games with any local or suburban high school.

Six veterans of last year's squad are again eligible to play. Although no captain has been selected as yet, Arthur McManus is being favored for the position.

TWO SPECIAL TRAINS TO WILSON BATTLE

It is expected that close to 2000 Boston and New England fans will be at the ringside when Johnny Wilson defends his world's middleweight title against Mike O'Dowd at Madison Square Garden, New York, tomorrow night.

Joe McCarthy, who is piloting one party to Big Broadway, announces that reservations may be secured at the office of the Faneuil A. C., No. 89 Court street.

$1,000 POSTED TO BACK CHALLENGE OF FULTON

New York, March 16.—Tom O'Rourke, manager of Fred Fulton, the Minnesota heavyweight, has posted $1,000 to back his challenge to fight Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world. The forfeit has been placed in the hands of the secretary of the National Boxing Association in this city.

WEST END FIVE READY TO BATTLE THE CELTICS

The West End Council (K. of C.) five, which is to meet the Celtics in a basketball game at Knights of Columbus Hall, Somerville, Saturday night, is training hard and if necessary could jump right in and give the formidable New York quintet a battle.

Sixteen School Teams in Basketball Series

Sixteen school basketball teams representing all the New England States, will clash in the interscholastic tournament to be held at Tufts College Friday and Saturday. The entries:

Maine—Bangor High, Edward Little High of Auburn and Morse High of Bath.

New Hampshire—Portsmouth High.

Vermont — Burlington High and Springfield High.

Massachusetts — Durfee High of Fall River, Westfield High, Watertown High, Adams High, Colebrook High and Gloucester High.

Rhode Island — Rogers High of Newport.

Connecticut — Torrington High, Commercial High of New Haven and Wilby High of Waterbury.

TOMMY ROBSON AND JACKIE CLARKE TO BOX

Providence, March 16.—Jackie Clark of Fall River will battle Tommy Robson in the main bout at the National A. C., Marieville tonight. Indications are that the bout will be a hummer. In the semi-final Young Robideau and Barney Rivers get together for ten rounds. Buck Whelan of Fox Point will meet Young Langford and the finals in the 105 and 115-pound classes of the amateur tournament held last week will take place.

HARVARD SUBS BEAT REGULARS BY 9 TO 4

Harvard substitutes banged out a 9 to 4 victory over the regulars in seven innings. Hard hitting featured the game, with the regular players bowling some of the opposition's slaps. George Owen of football and hockey fame, has reported, and is being used at first on the regular nine.

Amateur Bouts Friday

The St. Joseph's T. A. Society will be on the job with an amateur show at Commercial Hall, Friday evening. There will be fruitics at 108, 115, 125 and 135 pounds. Entries close Thursday with John W. Manning, No. 31 Cambridge street.

Hanover, March 16.—Dartmouth meets the Penn basketball team here tonight for the championship of the Intercollegiate League with two men out of the regular line-up.

Larson, one of the crack centre trio, is ill with a weak ankle which Oliver star forward, is not in the best condition. Both men will start the game tonight.

The coach feels fine in perfect shape and full of confidence. Most who Penn and Blue guard, who is the league's high scorer, is depended upon to bring victory to Penn, while Dartmouth relies on Cullen, midget forward, and Miller, the crack guard.

TILLO IN FINE SHAPE FOR BOUT WITH CARNEY

Frank Tillo, North End welterweight, is busy preparing himself for his ten-round encounter with Billy Carney which will be staged at Worcester tomorrow night.

Tillo recently made a big hit with Worcester fans when he won over Greek Algar of the South End in a rugged battle. The fans who witnessed Tillo batter his way to a victory over Algar are doubtful whether even a tough fellow like Carney can stand up under his wallops.

Carney has won his last two starts, defeating Mickey Donovan and Shaver O'Brien, and will make a great bid for a win tomorrow night.

GARDNER AND BRUCE TO WRESTLE HERE

Pinky Gardner will have one of the hardest battles of his career when he hooks up with Jean Bruce at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night to wrestle for a finish for the middle weight championship.

Bruce is at his best just now, as he proved at New York Monday night in one of the events preceding the Stecker-Ebyszko contest.

COACH McCARTHY HUSTLES B. C. SQUAD

No Idle Moments for Hopeful Baseball Candidates at University Heights

The weather man came through with a bit of real Summer, of which Tom McCarthy took full advantage by whooping things up a bit with the B. C. diamond squad.

The whooping up process will continue steadily as soon means nothing to the B. C. mentor. With the season's opener a month away he figures the percentage lies in making the most of what good weather he is in as soon as it can.

That pastery man has the kinks pretty well ironed out, and the hope fu suggers will have some real sports in fact a few shorts.

AUTO SALON AT COPLEY-PLAZA BIG SUCCESS

Nation's Finest Cars Exhibited in Ballroom of Back Bay Hotel

The automobile salon at the Copley Plaza opened last night and was accorded success as an impressive automobile week in Boston. The beautiful cars set in the picturesque ballroom of the hotel formed an exhibit of which both Boston and the makers directly interested, can be justly proud.

Under the guiding hand of Chester I. Campbell, a past master at staging successful exhibitions, the scheme made such an impression on the interested throng which passed through the doors that it is quite evident that will be an annual event from now on.

The cars exhibited are among the finest built in the country and the upholstery and finish, especially of the closed models, is the utmost in automobile workmanship and design. All the exhibitors were willing to add on the five acres of cars and the interested superintendence and free thorough inspection of the various models.

"BUY NOW," IS SLOGAN.

At Mechanics Building the crowds poured through the doors and the attendance was the greatest since the opening night. All the exhibitors expect a wonderful week for business. The public has become alerted to the fact that there is to be a sale of cars this Spring and "buy now" seems to be the slogan.

This advantage to the way is not a myth but a most striking and timely reality. Manufacturers have curtailed production to a certain extent in most cases that late Spring and summer early summer deliveries are even now quoted.

INTEREST IN TRUCKS

In the truck department much interest is displayed. While truck owners have been making the old models do, it is an assured fact that new trucks will be in demand soon and the wise ones are getting their orders in now. From all over the country come reports of renewed activity in the motor truck business.

General business is getting better. Building has started and threatened railroad difficulties only point to an increased demand for motor trucks.

The accessory dealers report much interest in this important department and a general increase of business seems assured.

FAVORS GRADING SYSTEM FOR MILK IN BOSTON

A milk grading system for all New England and a rigid enforcement of the regulations were urged by Dr. N. C. Davis of the H. P. Hood & Sons milk distributing firm in an address at the Fenway Memorial Hospital. Dr. Davis insisted upon the need of proper standards for milk, made as is done in New York, so he asserted the milk is better than any other city in the country. There he pointed out, the authorities divided the milk into four grades, permitting a dealer to charge different prices for the various classes.

3 ARRESTS IN LELAND GIN THEFT

Three men were arrested today by Charlestown police and held as suspicious characters, and the authorities are trying to connect them with the theft of $7,000 worth of gin and whiskey from the Manchester Summer home of Lester Leland, president of the American Rubber Company.

The liquor was taken away in an automobile truck, after the thieves had represented themselves to the servants of the house as prohibition enforcement agents.

Persons who saw the "raid" will be taken to Charlestown to identify, if possible, the three men held in a technical charge, if they are found in it the men hinted they will probably be taken to Manchester.

The men held range from twenty-two to twenty-seven years of age. One lives in Medford, another in Cambridge and the third in South Boston.

The cases of gin said to be a part of the fifty seven cases that were stolen were recovered in a raid on the house at No. 2 Tremont street, Charlestown.

The auto truck the thieves used to carry the liquor from Leland's Summer home was traced to a Charlestown garage.

SPENCER BUILDS FIRST HOUSE IN 20 YEARS

Whole Town Turns Out to See Strange Sight as Carpenters Toil

Twenty years ago the town got a start on its building that filled its needs completely until Dr. A. A. Bemis decided to erect a new dwelling on High street. Dr. Bemis claims it is the first house erected here in twenty years.

The dearth in building is not due to any lack of prosperity, for there are several industries here, all of which have enjoyed periods of activity in the last two decades. But in 1880, according to the older residents, Spencer was on the crest of a boom and the houses erected previous to and during that time have since been taken care of in a manner adequately.

Figures of the United States Census Bureau which have just been published show Spencer's population for 1920 as 3,910. This was a loss of 416 in ten years, the population having been 4,746 in 1910. The same kind of decline was shown in the previous ten years, the number of inhabitants having been 7,827 in 1900. Spencer lost 887 citizens from 1900 to 1910.

So it is little wonder that the new home of Dr. Bemis is an object of curiosity. Many persons go to the site for the sole purpose of viewing progress on this novelty. It is of two apartments, built in bungalow style and of wood and stucco construction. Plasterers are working on the interior this week and the owner says it will probably be ready for occupancy about June 1.

New Auto Magazine Printed in Boston

The Linscott Reo-Gram is the name of the newest arrival in the world of automobile house magazines, published by the Linscott Motor Company, No. 566 Commonwealth avenue.

The first issue contains, among other things, an interesting account of Mr. Linscott's twenty-one years' connection with the automobile business and the Linscott Road Races of the late nineties, together with editorials and articles of general interest to the automobile owner and driver and a directory of Reo dealers.

A unique feature is a series of short, pungent messages published in the daily press under the heading almost identical with the name it bears, Linscott Reo-Grams.

Power of Stewart Truck Explained

"The wonderful power of Stewart motor trucks is due in a large measure to the rear axle which is of the improved internal gear type," says Ross Maddox of the Stewart Automobile Company, local distributors. "Primarily the internal gear drive type is an adaptation of the chain drive, which method of propulsion is often conceded to be the most powerful, but due to the chain stretching and the sprockets wearing rapidly, the chain drive to a great extent is not used in this age—therefore, the internal gear drive came into its own as a most logical successor to the chain drive and, because of its superiority in every respect, it is now acknowledged to be the most powerful and efficient drive for all capacity trucks. It is found just as efficient on heavy duty trucks as on light delivery models.

"All Stewart trucks have the internal gear type which accounts for their surplus power under all conditions."

ECONOMY BUILT INTO THE NEW LEXINGTON CAR

Full Pressure Lubricating System Featured in Series "T" Models

Strictest economy and long car-life have been built into the new Series "T" models of the Lexington Motor Company, of Connersville, Ind., through two mechanical improvements that are attracting much attention, especially among the mechanically inclined, at this week's automobile show.

The life of an engine depends upon its lubrication. The lubricating system of the Lexington Series "T" models is the latest and most perfect known to automotive engineers. It is the full pressure feed type with pressure regulation according to the power being delivered by the engine.

PRESSURE REGULATED.

The pressure is regulated by the vacuum in the intake manifold and is in proportion to the work being done. Since all the lubricating oil passes through the crank shaft it acts as a coolant, just as the water which is circulated around the cylinders. It removes the heat from the crankshaft bearings just as the water does from the cylinders.

Two oil is circulated by a gear pump which has been put to an accessible position on the left side of the crank case. The supply of oil is carried in the bottom half of the crank case and the level may be ascertained by a blade type of oil level gauge, which is positive in its action and cannot stick.

The Series "T" cooling system includes a tubular type of radiator, a two-bladed "floating-oil" fan, unique type of water circulating pump, and a thermostat which regulates the temperature of the engine.

NEW STYLE PUMP.

The water pump is a new design which circulates water at speeds far below that of the ordinary pump and which will permit a natural thermo-syphon circulation of water should the drive break. This is not possible with most water pumps.

The thermostatic control of the engine tempera ure assures that it will stay a about 140 degrees Fahrenheit. The engine is designed to operate at its best efficiency at this temperature.

These improvements mean not only longer car-life but make possible greater economy of operation and maintenance.

A. H. Bowers, general manager of Lexington Automobile Company, reports many Lexington sales since the opening of the show.

CALLS SHOW BIG BOOM TO AUTO INDUSTRY

Exhibition Has Moved Factories Off of Dead Centre, Alfred Reeves Tells Dealers

Speaking before more than 1 000 automobile men at the meeting of the Boston Automobile Dealers Association at the Convention Hall last night Alfred Reeves general manager, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, declared that the record breaking automobile show now open in Boston, along with similar exhibitions in other cities, has moved the automobile industry off dead centre and sent the motor car on its way toward a normal spring selling season.

The automobile industry, was among the first to be affected by the depression and is now among the first to make the upward turn.

Reeves said the Boston show equaled in every respect the exhibition in New York and Chicago and surpassed both of them in retail sales. Attendance records have been broken at most shows.

Among other things Reeves said, "This upward turn in our industry all means that, as in 1907 1914 and 1918, the automobile industry will lead the public pulse and will lead in the return of prosperity.

"No one expects our trade to duplicate the extraord nary business of last year, with its record f gures of 1 900 cars and 32,000 trucks but in a big country we have an ever increasing need for transportation that should bring a substant al business in cars and trucks during the spring. What follows will depend entirely on the general business situation.

"It was logical that our industry, which increased 250 per cent in five years, should slow down with the re adjustment of industry generally which in the long run will benefit everyone.

TRANSPORTATION NEED.

"Transportation is the crying need of the hour in a country like this. The 3,000,000 cars and 900,000 trucks registered are supplying a big utility service which will continue to broaden.

"New York heads the list with 681,000 motor vehicles, followed by Ohio, Pennsylvania and California. The biggest percentage of increase was in West Virginia, Mississippi, Florida and Texas.

"South Dakota has taken the lead with one motor vehicle for every 3.4 persons, followed by Ohio, Nebraska and California.

"Renewals to keep this same number of motors registered will require more than a million vehicles a year.

"The whole industry is conservatively optimistic.

"An industry that does more than $2,000,000,000 wholesale and is the second largest manufacturing industry in the country naturally had to take time to slow down and will take some little time to get into its stride again.

HYSTERIA PASSED.

"Some of the biggest banking houses in the country, just getting into the automobile business, declare it is now on a settled basis. This includes J. P. Morgan & Company and the du Pont people, who have made big purchases into the General Motors Company.

"It is generally acknowledged that automobile men are too optimistic in good times and too pessimistic in bad times.

"I am glad to say the hysteria has passed. The industry is in good balance, viewing things philosophically and appreciating that cars are wearing out which must soon be replaced.

"Manufacturers and dealers have proved true to the statement of Charles Clifton, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, that the industry was big enough to go through the readjustment process with credit and with only a few small concerns getting into financial difficulties.

"The motor car and motor truck have geared America to a new scale of living in commerce, providing a new standard of living and inaugurated a new philosophy of thought.

HIGHWAYS VITAL FACTOR.

"Two and one-quarter million miles are open for highway transportation, which with railways and waterways make for the trinity of transportation that means so much to America.

"The public does not really appreciate the exact position of the motor vehicle in the scheme of transportation."

Reeves called attention to the need for fair legislation. He favored laws which would prevent overloaded motor trucks going over the highways at excessive speed. The weight of a truck was not so important provided it had tires of proper width and its load properly distributed. He said that road damage came from overloaded trucks of all sizes travelling at excessive speeds.

He declared that the car owners of the state are now paying millions of dollars in fees and that an immediate transportation problem as to motor car and motor truck should not be further hampered by additional taxes.

In closing Reeves declared the automobile manufacturers, as always are conservatively optimistic as to the future of the motor car trade and highly optimistic on the future of the nation.

Hupmobile Has Many New Features

Certain noteworthy improvements and refinements in detail, fittings and general appearance mark the Hupmobile exhibit at the Boston Auto Show as a centre of attraction for those that admire the car and its twelve-year record.

The four-cylinder chassis of the Hupmobile model first designated in October 1912 now embodies numerous minor improvements in design and manufacture developed since that time. It has been universally cared and approved in the hands of over 50 0 owners.

All four open and closed models are presented in new body designs, one of the most pic ca e being the new four-door sedan. On the touring car and roadster the top shape is new, and along original lines. The rear window is one unusually wide piece of plate glass. Tool ompa ments and exit arrangements in the doors is made doubly convenient by both outside and inside door handles. Fenders have been lengthened, and their slightly sagged design and greatly to the car's appearance.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE CAR IN DEBUT

Smart Models of Super-Construction Impress at First Show Exhibition

The new Wills Sainte Claire motor cars which were on exhibit in Boston this week for the first time are worthy, an extraordinary amount of interest at the Boston show where Mr. Wills and his associates have been exhibited. The C. Fay-Allen Company, Boston dealers, have been appointed distributors for Massachusetts, and are being assisted by Mr. Wills and his associates who have come on from Detroit for the occasion.

Besides a new style of body treatment Mr. Wills who is generally recognized as one of the foremost designers in this country, has developed a special type of motor which is approximately 2 horsepower more than the ordinary high grade motor car of this size. The car which is approximately 2 horsepower more than the ordinary high grade motor car of this size. The car which is approximately 2 horsepower more than the ordinary high grade motor car of this size. The car which is approximately 2 horsepower more than the ordinary high grade motor car of this size.

The motor is V-type with eight cylinders set at an angle of 135 degrees. The valves are cam operated of the overhead construction and the cams are also driven by means of a special helical gear.

The models of the Wills Sainte Claire exhibit at the show are four in number and consist of a five passenger touring car, a two passenger coupe and a stripped chassis with bare frame on which the purchaser may build the car's body according to his own design.

The display of the new Wills Sainte Claire cars at the show is a revelation to the many who have seen the cars have appeared. It has been the firm policy of H. W. and K. Wills not to exhibit their cars to any public show where they are not represented by direct factory and a service organization.

The remarkable interest aroused this last year in the Wills Sainte Claire is being repeated in the interest shown in the cars during the show. The C. Fay Allen Company has added substantially to its organization in order to give demonstrations and an early delivery on the novel features of the cars design.

NEW STARTING AND LIGHTING BATTERY

Announcement is made of a new starting and lighting storage battery for the New England trade for which the Electric Accessories Co. of Boston, Mass., is the exclusive distributor. The new battery is manufactured in the Vesta factories of Indianapolis and is said to have unusual power and long life. W. E. Dennison is manager of the Vesta Boston agency and is in charge of the exhibit.

The president of the Vesta Company is also president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and is well known in motoring circles both in the builders' business. Among them was Mr. Wilson, president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and general sales manager of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. Akron, Ohio, and Mr. Martin Gerdon, president of the Marmon Motor Car Co. Indianapolis.

LIBERTY ENGINE ADDS TO FUEL ECONOMY

Members of the Liberty Six organization during the automobile show season are celebrating the termination of a year filled with events justifying all that was promised, and more, at last year's shows in regard to the new type of Liberty engine made public at that time, says George Leighton, New England distributor.

About a year ago the Liberty Motor Car Co. of Detroit began to use its own motor for the Liberty Six, and engineers soon boldly set out to pioneer new phases of automobile engineering, since proved successful.

"One of Liberty's most notable achievements has been the success of the use of three detachable cylinder heads, all of which are interchangeable. A multitude of tests have proved that this method has increased power and smoothness of operation, reduced the effort and expense of repair work and added to fuel economy and effectiveness.

"The adoption of the four-bearing crankshafts and camshaft has been another pioneer accomplishment in a car of the Liberty's class. The Liberty is the first medium-priced car to instal and perfect this admittedly effective means of reducing vibration and increasing the smoothness, longevity and reliability of the engine.

"The hot chamber system, introduced to the automotive world at the shows a year ago by the same car, has developed some remarkable records for gasoline economy. The system, involving the special hot chamber and an ingeniously designed intake manifold, insures complete vaporisation, thorough combustion, and hence prevents gas leaking into the crankcases.

"Excellent records for speedy acceleration have also been made possible through this thorough carburetion, in conformity with perfect timing and all-round efficiency in the engine."

RUESCHAW WELCOMED AT LINSCOTT DINNER

The Linscott Motor Company gave a dinner to its dealers at the Boston City Club last evening which in a way was a "home" affair for R. C. Rueschaw, who recently returned to the Reo Motor Car Company at Lansing, Mich., after an absence of some time.

Mr. Rueschaw was enthusiastically received by his old dealers and complimented Mr. Linscott on his wonderful organization.

The Reo Motor Car Company has been fortunate in securing such a distributor for New England (Mr. Linscott was really the first Reo dealer) and the success of his efforts is best shown by the popularity of the Reo in this territory. Vice-President Rueschaw spoke of the wonderful strides of the Reo Company and predicted a wonderful year for Reo dealers if they kept going at the speed which they have displayed so far.

DEFEAT OF COLOMBIAN TREATY IS FORESEEN

By Universal Service.

Washington, March 16.—Defeat of the Colombian treaty when it is called up for ratification at the special session of Congress next month was confidently predicted by the Republican insurgents who are organising a fight upon it.

They announced that assurances had been given them by Democratic leaders that while they favor the treaty they will support them in their demand that the consideration of the pact be conducted in the open. Once sessions on the treaty, they declare further, virtually will mean its death as there are a number of Senators who will be compelled to vote against it publicly, although they might vote for it in secret.

LINCOLN

LINCOLN

COMING as they are in ever-growing numbers, expressions lauding the Lincoln car afford convincing testimony that motordom discerns a rare achievement. They provide evidence that motordom sees intrinsic betterments—refinements which could not be evolved except through ripe experience and many years' devotion to high ideals.

It was purposed that the Lincoln be a car superior in its road ability. But motordom observes a range of performance for which it knows no precedent.

It was purposed that the Lincoln be a car exceptional in its ease and riding comfort. But in the estimate of motordom the Lincoln car gives new meaning to these terms.

It was purposed that the Lincoln be a car of swiftness in abridging distance. Motordom perceives a car which gives a maximum result over any road.

It was purposed that the Lincoln car be sturdy and enduring. Motordom concedes a car wherein the elements contributing to those qualities—always pronounced in products that are Leland-built—are conspicuous now in even greater measure.

The citations could be multiplied. But the essence is—that motordom has recognized the Lincoln car as upholding fully the tradition of its makers.

And that tradition is—that their each and every new achievement shall surpass the best that has gone before.

PIERCE-ARROW IMPROVES ITS ENGINE

Greater Power With Added Fuel Economy Secured, Says J. W. Maguire

"The performance of the dual valve type of engine introduced two years ago by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company until now has never been equalled," said J. W. Maguire

"The refined dual valve engine which powers the new Pierce-Arrow yields results which, point for point, enhance the standards set by its predecessor.

"Greater power with an added fuel economy is accomplished through better carburetion and a slight increase in engine speed, safeguarded by improved lubrication, more liberal bearing surfaces and a decidedly more rigid construction. Dual ignition, which assures complete combustion of maximum explosive force, continues to be a feature of the car.

"In the latest addition to the Pierce-Arrow line, basic principles of Pierce-Arrow construction are maintained, policy is to co-operate with dealers and not force cars on him.

"In one sense the Pierce-Arrow is essentially a woman's car," says Mr. Maguire. "To drive a Pierce-Arrow is a pleasure. In that sense, little effort is required to steer. Gear shifting can be done easily even by a novice because of an ever-running intermediate gear as an exclusive feature. A slight pressure depresses the clutch and brake pedals. A new type of foot accelerator permits the foot to rest upon it naturally for hours without fatigue.

"A noticeable improvement has been effected in the riding qualities. A scientifically-designed spring suspension permits of a high speed over rough roads without jounce or sideway.

The open models of the new Pierce-Arrow include a two-passenger runabout, and four, six and seven passenger cars. The closed models are the limousine, coupe-sedan, sedan, vestibule sedan, brougham and landaulet.

WHITE TRUCKS GIVE YEARS OF SERVICE

Practically double the number of trucks are recorded by the White Company in its new tabulation of White trucks still working after having rendered 100,000, 200,000 300,000 miles and more of service. The new summary shows 14 firms own 26 trucks which have traveled 300,000 miles and more; 15 firms own 96 trucks, each of which has gone between 200,000 and 300,000 miles; 24 firms own 134 trucks, with mileage records between 150,000 and 200,000 miles; and 307 firms own 561 trucks with better than 100,000 miles to the credit of each. These trucks, varying greatly in age, represent all kinds of work, done under all sorts of conditions.

Among the Boston concerns operating White trucks that have traveled in excess of 100,000 miles are the Downes Lumber Company, Johnson Educator Food Company, the Webster Transportation Company and Warner & Co

GOVERNOR AND MAYOR INDORSE IRISH RELIEF

Cox Says Phelan's Leadership Inspires Confidence; Peters Emphasizes Erin's Need

The State and city came out today in indorsement of the drive for funds for relief in Ireland, which begins tomorrow, St. Patrick's day, throughout the United States.

Governor Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts sent the following letter to James J. Phelan, Massachusetts state chairman of the Committee for Relief in Ireland, No 166 Lagrange street, Boston

"I have your letter of March 11 suggesting that my indorsement of the endeavor to raise funds for the suffering in Ireland would be appreciated. The people of Massachusetts have the deepest sympathy for the distressed of any part of the world, and I am sure they agree with Mr Hoover that questions of race, religion or politics should not be considered when it comes to alleviating human misery

SUPPORT IS URGED

"Your splendid service as a member of the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety and in the relief of stricken Belgium will inspire confidence in the work in which you are now engaged, and your representation that the work of your committee is solely for humanitarian purposes will be taken as true. I hope your efforts to relieve suffering in Ireland may be generously supported.

Mayor Peters sent the following endorsement.

"I wish to express my hearty endorsement of the campaign of the American Committee for Relief in Ireland.

"Villages and homes have been wrecked in that once happy country, and families have been left without food and shelter. Relief, I understand, is to be administered by a committee of Quakers, without distinction as to creed or politics. Contributions to this cause will relieve the suffering of the women and children of a country which has always been liberal in its sympathies."

The automobile has ceased to be a luxury. It might have been called one, at the start, like the airplane But the luxury of yesterday becomes the necessity of today. As Mr. Lonsdale so aptly puts it: "Many years ago when our forefathers had wooden doors and sliding shutters for windows, a sash glass was regarded as a luxury only for the rich but now it is a necessity even for the poor, for sunshine and pure air flow from wi most and keeping with the warmth necessary to home comfort

People have but their eyes around the automobile, bought their homes selected their vacation camps and their summer cottages. Business have been developed around the touring car and truck as the indispensable vehicle

AUTO ESSENTIAL TO NEW ERA OF WORLD

Ceases to Be a Luxury and Awaits Advent of "Something Better"

By JOSEPH DONOVAN.
Local Studebaker Distributor.

The third largest industry in America and that means the whole world did not attain its place of eminence by mere accident or through any seasonal or faddish demand for the product of its great institutions

The automobile, both passenger and commercial, is an absolute necessity of a new era—and it will continue as a necessity until something newer and better takes its place. However, up to the present time no one even has an inkling of something better

The great majority of the people realize the economic value of the motor car—it would be as impossible to conceive of personal and business efficiency without the automobile today as it would be to conceive of handling modern business without fast express trains, fast freights, telegraphs or long distance telephones.

NECESSARY FOR SPEED.

The motor car has not only become an essential part of modern life, but it has been greatly responsible for the development of the way we live and do business today It has indeed, made possible the wonderful business achievements which we accomplish in the twelve months of the year.

John J. Lonsdale, president of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, is nationally known in the world of finance. His opinion, based on cold, unbiased facts, is worthy of special note. Mr. Lonsdale has publicly set forth a financial policy which recognizes the motor vehicle as a time-economy unit. He says:

"This is an age of electricity and gasoline. Distance is annihilated by the telegraph and telephone. Business is transacted not only nationally, but internationally, by wire. Money is transported by telegraphic transfers of credit. If it is a question of hard surfaced roads and automobiles against the country worn road and the ox cart in the rut, nobody wants to go back to the 'old days.'

MUST HAVE TIME-SAVER.

"If the high cost of living is a problem and a man's fixed expense is to be reckoned, we must have a time-saver, whether it be the telephone, telegraph, the wireless, the automobile or gasoline propelled surface car, or the airplane. It makes no difference whether a man is a bricklayer plumber or banker if his time is worth anything it is economy to limit his period of transportation."

The automobile has ceased to be a luxury. It might have been called one, at the start, like the airplane But the luxury of yesterday becomes the necessity of today. As Mr. Lonsdale so aptly puts it: "Many years ago when our forefathers had wooden doors and sliding shutters for windows, a sash glass was regarded as a luxury only for the rich but now it is a necessity even for the poor, for sunshine and pure air flow from wi most and keeping with the warmth necessary to home comfort

People have but their eyes around the automobile, bought their homes selected their vacation camps and their summer cottages. Business have been developed around the touring car and truck as the indispensable vehicle

100 NASH MEN GUESTS OF ROCKWELL

Co-operation Keynote of Business With Dealers Sounded at Copley-Plaza Dinner

Gathered in the Copley Plaza at dinner last night were men who have done much to make the name of Nash famous throughout New England. They were the guests of F. Rockwell Howard of Nash and LaFayette cars and they came from all parts of the land of the Pilgrims—100 strong.

When Mr. Rockwell as toastmaster, walked his guests he was greeted by the applause of the evening. Charles H. Yorkhis, vice-president and general sales manager of the Nash organization, the enthusiasm knew no bounds

We have one motto in this time when our individual organizations must be more closely unified," said Mr. Yorkhis. "Manufacturers must be close to dealers and vice versa," he went on.

"There must be more frankness and consideration displayed on both sides. In short, to be successful, we must develop a stronger feeling of mutual interest. I do not believe that dealer organizations attach sufficient importance to the part they play in this great era of industries

"I am reminded of what that venerable man of God, Cardinal Gibbons, once enunciated as the most important element of success—'faith.' That is just what we must have, and that is just what I am sure you all have. We have faith because we know that we have something to offer the public in which we can have faith—a faith that our cars are bound to justify."

Faris Howard, vice-president and general manager of the LaFayette motors, sounded one of the most optimistic notes of the evening. He was roundly cheered after a witty introduction by toastmaster Rockwell. Mr. Howard said that he was always pleased to visit the Hub on show, because it gave him an opportunity to meet many friends of long standing. Referring to present-day business conditions he said that, to him, the outlook seems bright and that there is every reason to expect a fine business season. The dinner will go down in history as one of the notable social successes of the Rockwell organization as well as an event of a real inspirational nature

LATEST PIERCE-ARROW SHOWN IN BACKWOODS

Although they were unaware of it backwoods folk of North Carolina were the first to view the latest Pierce-Arrow creations when one being exhibited this week at the Auto show. During the winter of 1919-1920 the first of five test cars pounded over mountain roads in 1 at country 24 hours a day, drivers working in shifts. But this car was so well designed that no one suspected it to be a Pierce-Arrow.

New Boston Truck Is Heartily Praised

A new one-ton truck has been introduced at this year's show under the name of "Ajax," made by the Ajax Motors Corporation of Boston. William Hollingsworth, manager of the Ajax Sales Company, has received hearty congratulations for the product.

There are many features to make it popular with those who seek a commercial car built to withstand more than the ordinary strains to which a truck is subjected. Mr. Hollingsworth explained the object of the designers, to give a sturdy truck, which would deliver the maximum in service, be economical in operation, and flexible under all conditions of load and traffic.

The principal specifications are: Wheelbase, 134 inches, loading platform, 104. Wesfield motor, Delco ignition, Timken axles, Ross steering column, Parish frame, G & C radiator, Firestone cords, engine-driven tire pump, Stromberg carburetor, built-in governor, and a storm-proof driver's cab. The truck is exhibited in space 300.

Mr. Hollingsworth also announces a pleasure car to carry the name "Ajax," in touring and roadster types. It is a six, designed for economy at a reasonable price, and all the features necessary to meet this standard have been embodied. A pleasing attraction is the permanent all-weather top, with curtains so arranged that the driver may change from an open to closed car in fifteen seconds.

PIONEERING IS BIG BOON TO MOTOR CAR

Has Placed Stearns Knight in the High Position It Is Occupying Today

"Fearless pioneering has placed the Stearns Knight motor car in the enviable position it occupies in the automobile world today," says J. H. MacAimas, dealer in Stearns Knight cars in Boston. "At the time Daimler in England, Panhard in France, and Minerva in Belgium, leaders in the foreign automobile field, were adopting the Knight type of sleeve valve motor, Stearns was experimenting with it, and shortly after adopted it. That was in 1911 and many of those early cars are still running today

"Stearns Knight cars always have been built under a unique system of intensive production. They are made in strictly limited quantities because the building of any preeminently fine article is impossible on a larger scale.

"The fixed policy is to build only a limited number of cars a day, in order to concentrate the powers of a large plant and organization on a small number of vehicles of the most superior quality. In short, the Stearns Knight car is strictly a custom-built product.

LINCOLN CAR ON VIEW AT SALON

This Type Shown Here for First Time at the Copley-Plaza

Motorists and much to interest them in the new Leland-built Lincoln car now displayed for the first time at a Boston automobile show. Otis Fonderbrok of the Puritan Motor Corporation sponsors the new car.

The Lincoln is on view at the Mechanics' Building, but it is on exhibition at the salon in the Copley-Plaza. A special exhibit will also be held during the week at the Lincoln salesrooms at Commonwealth avenue and Babcock street. The salesrooms will be open evenings during the week

An exceptional opportunity to examine in detail the many fine points of the latest creation among cars of quality is provided by a polished chassis, a feature of the exhibit at the show. This chassis is sectioned and illuminated in such a way as to give an inside view of the motor and other important units, all of which are shown in operation.

MANY CONVENIENCES.

In the creation of the new eight-cylinder, V-type, high-speed, high-efficiency engine, which type by the way, was introduced first by the Lelands six years ago, several departures from conventional practice are in evidence

The crankshaft is supported by five large bearings instead of the usual three, and substantial webs in the crankcase add to the stability of the power plant.

In the ignition system, instead of only one induction coil being used, one for each block of cylinders, insuring a spark of sufficient intensity to meet all requirements.

Another feature of the engine is the manner in which heat is applied to the incoming gas. In addition to a special method of channelling, by which intake and exhaust passages in cylinder blocks are made adjacent to each other, provision for heating the incoming gas is found in the design of the intake header. This is divided into three passages. The middle one is the carburetor-to-cylinder gas passage, the outer for water returning to the water tank of the radiator, while the inner one is connected directly to each exhaust manifold. In this arrangement incoming gas is heated by exhaust gas and also by water.

SPECIAL DEVICES.

Passage of cold air through the radiator is controlled by shutters operated by a thermostat which automatically opens or closes them according to requirements. This tends to maintain the right temperature for efficient running. There is also a device which conserves the cooling liquid by condensing the vapor which would otherwise be lost.

Headlights have tilting reflectors which direct a beam of the light rays and the controlling device is operated from the driver's seat. This adds materially to the comfort and safety of night driving.

SIMPLE LUBRICATION.

Chassis bearing points, such as spring bolts, steering connections and brake mechanism bearings, may be lubricated in about one-fourth the time usually required. This is accomplished by means of a hand pressure system with lubricant gun quickly attachable at convenient points.

Open cars are equipped with storm-tight curtains, which are arranged to open with doors. These curtains are stored in a special compartment in the back of the front seat, where they are easily accessible without disturbing passengers.

HOLYOKE CORD TIRES WIN GOOD DISPLAY

One of the main features outside the Auto show is the display of Holyoke Cord Tires, the product of the New England Tire and Rubber Company, which has just completed a new factory at Holyoke with a capacity of 1,000 tires daily.

The Boston agents for Holyoke Cord, the City Rubber Company, of No. 238 Columbus avenue, were unable to obtain space at the show for their display but were fortunate in getting several desirable window sites in the central part of the city.

Holyoke Cord Tires are on display in the windows of A. Shuman & Co., Washington and Summer streets; Leopold Morse Company, Adams square; Winchester Arms Company, West and Tremont streets; Nickerson, The Haberdasher, No. 92 Boylston street; and in the foyer of the Copley Square Hotel.

If I am any judge, the auto show this year is a far greater success than in former years. There is a greater variety and vast improvement in both cars and accessories. It is hard to determine which is predominant. What struck my fancy most in the accessory line was the New Ball Tire—manufactured by the Simplex Pneumatic Tire Co., of 15 Federal St., Boston—as it has all the essential qualifications that are desired by the automobile public. It is a most resilient tire—absolutely puncture and blow-out proof—and so far as I can see does away with all the ills prevalent to the ordinary tire now in use. It is wonderfully constructed so far as resiliancy and strength is concerned—I doubt if it has an equal. The automobile public generally appreciate the improvements that are apparent in this tire—by the large number of orders already taken. One of the salesmen told me it would be an utter impossibility to take care of all the orders at this time as they were coming in so fast.—Advertisement.

APPERSON GIVES BANKERS' VIEW OF AUTOS

Explains Relations of Industry to General Situation in Financial World

"The bankers' point of view in regard to the automobile industry is one that is generally not understood or either misconstrued," said Edgar Apperson, president, Apperson Brothers Automobile Company, Kokomo, Ind., when recently interviewed in regard to the financial situation as it relates to the industry.

"If the people or, I might say, the business men themselves, would stop to consider for a minute the many problems of the banker, they would not be so hasty in their decisions and conclusions. To begin with, put yourself in the bankers' place. Try to imagine the innumerable businesses continually pounding them for credit, and you will get some conception of the situation from where the banker sits. Every staple and essential must be taken care of first.

"As great as the motor industry is, the men in it must not get the idea that theirs is the only business in the world. The motor car business can only be good along with the prosperity of other essential industries.

"I am inclined to think that a large proportion of the men in our industry and particularly the dealers do not fully comprehend the great difference between credit and capital.

"A growing business must accumulate some surplus in proportion to the growth of its business in order to continue to grow. If it will do this and can show the banker a proper statement occasionally, one will not have much trouble in getting a pretty good line of credit at his bank."

DORT MEASURES DEALERS BY ITS OWN STANDARD

John D. Mansfield, general sales manager of the Dort Motor Car Company, arrived yesterday for his annual visit to the Boston Show, an event which he never misses Incidentally, the new and commodious building of the Utterback-Gleason Company, Dort distributors for New England, was inspected for the first time by Mr. Mansfield, and caused him to make trite and interesting observations on the importance to factories of proper retail representation.

"It is a pleasure on the part of the manufacturer to distribute his product through men in whom he has faith We never have hurried in making a selling connection, and for that reason we are starting in this era of readjustment with a selling organization which co-operates not only with our business but with our ideals as well. This new building and its personnel is a monument to the confidence our distributors feel in us

"When a car has been growing in public favor, as has the Dort, in recent years, it is an easy matter to find dealers. All the world loves a winner, whether in sport or in business. But, not all applicants for dealership come up to the Dort requirements, and there are instances where considerable time has elapsed in the picking of 'the right party' to retail those cars

"Time tells the tale. Our selling organization grew with the car until it now spreads from ocean to ocean, from boundary to boundary It is brimful of health, the men are first-class merchants and good citizens They have found their connection profitable and we have found it agreeable"

GARDNER LIGHT FOUR MOTOR IS VERY STURDY

Contains No Hair Springs or Similar Delicate Mechanism

The heart of an automobile is its motor, and the manufacturers of the Gardner Light Four, which George H Leghorn represents in New England attracted interest at Paul Revere Hall at the show, are making a feature of an open display of all its working parts. The functions of the various parts, with their vital relation to each other and to the car as a whole, are explained in simple terms by experts from the company's headquarters at St. Louis

The open display of these parts and the plain and complete explanations of them are far from our knowledge that the average person, and even experienced automobile drivers, have an idea that the motor with a cylinder bore of 3½ inches and a rather delicate machine, says Vice-President Russell E Gardner, Jr

ALL STURDY PIECES.

The display of the comparatively few parts serves to discredit all the notion that the Gardner car is one to overwind. There are no such things as hair springs and similar delicate devices in the motor. Each piece and the sturdy whole will stand up under any reasonable strain, and can be relied upon to give satisfactory service in every way.

The motor in the Gardner car is four-cylinder, of the L-head type, with a 3½-inch bore and 5-inch stroke The cylinders are cast en bloc, separate from the crank case, with a detachable head The head is also detached, as are the lower half of the crank case and the cylinder block, making the whole motor very accessible

8,000 CARS ON ROAD.

The Gardner Light Four comes to Boston a well-tried stranger What the general public does not know is that while Gardner has successfully built and marketed a high-grade passenger car as well and sold it for four years one of the best known medium-priced automobiles on the market

He was, therefore, well equipped with experience and organization to build and market a car bearing his own name. How well that the Gardner market is the most discriminating in the world, be kept out of this market for years The company now has about 8,000 Gardner cars on the road driving satisfaction that exceeded their fondest hopes.

PAINTINGS ON EXHIBITION TELL STORY

Display at Copley-Plaza Show Progress of Nation in Transportation

At the auto show visitors have an opportunity this week of seeing in the lobby of the Copley-Plaza the series of paintings on "The Spirit of Transportation." These paintings are the work of the leading American artists and are intended to show the influence of transportation on civilization

Twelve artists were invited to dramatize each in his own manner the theme and in addition to being paid for his work entered the painting in competition for a $1000 prize. The following artists are represented.

A jury of award representative of industry art and the three avenues of transportation railway, marine and automotive—has undertaken to decide which of the paintings best portrays the theme. The members of the jury are Elbert H. Gary, Robert S. Lovett, Charles L. Hutchinson, W. C. Durant, Homer L. Ferguson and Frederick D. Underwood.

Each group of paintings has been gathered by the Clark Equipment Company, Buchanan, Mich., manufacturers of motor trucks and axles and wheels, to show that the automotive industry of America has built a system of transportation as important to the nation as the railway and steamship lines

"Civilization has progressed only as methods and means of transportation have improved," said Eugene R. Clark, president of the company. "Appreciating the contributions to transportation and world advancement made by the American automotive industry, we have invited these well known artists to dramatize each in his own manner, The Spirit of Transportation."

Autocar Truck Maker's Vision Proved True

Although the present universal use of the motor truck could not be predicted fifteen or twenty years ago there were some manufacturers who were far-sighted enough to realize what the future had in store for that vehicle.

The Autocar Company was established [illegible] in the days of experimental work from the very beginning the company has contributed in many [illegible] to the development of the principal stockholders are the ones who started the business.

After a short period of fixed determination to overcome obstacles, ability to accumulate experience and, what is more, to analyze and profit by it, were necessary merely to survive in the industry.

Those days are now past. The Autocar Co. is one of the few surviving pioneers in the contracting art the accumulated experience and resources of more than thirty years of consistent manufacturing effort in a single product, the Autocar Motor Truck. Both the company and the product have been tested in all ways through many years, in good times and bad, in peace, war and reconstruction. Today the Autocar plant at Ardmore, Pa., comprises a floor area of ten acres, all in active operation

NOT A MAN LAID OFF.

At a recent conference of the sales force, the president, David S Ludlum, stated that not during the last ten years had a man been laid off for want of production. This is truly a remarkable record.

Another interesting point is this, that there are 50,000 Autocar motor trucks operating in the hands of satisfied owners, and that last years business showed, by analysis, that 65 per cent. of the sales were made to those who already had Autocars.

In explaining the points of advantage possessed by this wonderful truck, J C Baker, resident manager for the Autocar Company in this territory, says: "Economy of operation and service are the two points that sell Autocars

"The Autocar, because of its original and unique design, balances its load evenly on all four wheels. This makes for economy in tires and general upkeep expenses.

"The weight of the two-ton chassis for example is but 3,068 pounds, a wonderful example of lightness and great strength. The cost of parts is another item, which should appeal to the careful business man in these times. It has been figured out that the cost to the customer of all the parts necessary to make a complete Autocar is less than the selling price of the truck complete.

MINIMUM LOSS OF POWER.

"There is only a minimum loss of power because of the short drive shaft which transmits the power to the rear wheels through the wonderful double reduction gear drive, a unique feature of the Autocar.

Autocar handiness is best shown by the statement that because of its short wheel base this truck can turn around in a 50-foot street without backing and can get in and around traffic easily, thus saving much time in the day's work.

"Because the Autocar is a manufactured truck the company has such confidence in it that it carries a one year guarantee, four times as long as the usual guarantee on trucks In the coal-hauling business Autocars are supreme and they are used by over 2,000 coal dealers throughout the United States.

"The high-lift body is familiar to many Boston people, as there are a number of Autocars operating with this type of body in this city When the body is raised the tail-gate is 7½ feet from the ground and a load almost three feet in depth can be coal directly into a window without baskets or shovel. This means an actual saving of time and money."

DEMAND KEEPS GROW PLANT ACTIVE

Tire Company Goes Full Blast In Spite of Depression During Winter Months

The growth of the George Grow Tire Company [illegible] a man big such as it [illegible] the industry is [illegible] of commercial progress [illegible] has few equals in the annals of New England manufacturing.

Although the Grow tire is but a few years old, already 109 agents have been established in New England states and, although the major part of the product is sold throughout this section, the tire also has become firmly established in the South and Middle West, and there is a growing foreign demand.

In fact, it is only because the output of the factory is in such great demand, that the company up to this time has been prevented from invading other fields.

This demand has been so constant, and so firmly has the business been established that the company has been able to run on a steady operation of 24 hours a day through the period of Winter depression, when many of the Western manufacturers were forced to close their doors or to curtail production.

As a matter of fact, the Grow tire business has been of such a constantly increasing nature and the demand has been so insistent, that present indications points to the early necessity of large additions on the part to keep pace with the business demands.

Grow tires are made at Canton Junction Mass., and the success the tire has met can be attributed to its high quality. Each tire is guaranteed against imperfections in material and workmanship and, as many customers already have learned, these tires represent economy through quality.

It is for this reason that the tires are in great demand by commercial haulers and taxi operators who are always seeking low cost per mile service

"FOR LOVE" ✦ Absorbing Romance by Ruby M. Ayres

The Start of the Story

Philip Winterdick, twenty-eight and carefree, the son of rich, bloodless parents, loves kitty Arlington, flirty and dimpled. She is of "good family," but in restricted circumstances. She is eager enough to marry Philip when he proposes. But his dream of happiness is short lived, for his father tells him the whole family future has been jeopardized in a steel deal. Further, he tells Philip that he has arranged with Dennison, a rich neighbor of no family "of financial aid under the condition that Philip marry Eva Dennison, to satisfy the elder Dennison's ambition to get his daughter a social station. Philip tells Kitty never really had anything that I wanted."

"You mean you don't care for me enough to marry me?"

Long Silence

There was a long silence; then she turned.

I must go back. I wish I had never come out. I wish I had never seen you."

There were tears in her voice now, tears of self pity only, but they wrung his heart. He began to plead with her afresh—he would work as man had never worked before he would lay down his life for her—he would make her the happiest woman in the world.

She cried in earnest now, but they were tears of disappointment; she had been so pleased at her success in catching the most eligible man for miles around — she had made such plans for the future, and now they were all down in the dust —she could still be engaged to Philip Winterdick if she chose, but the engagement would be shorn of all the glory. She could never live at the Highway House — she could never have her own car. She learned instinct, she was scouring out right by the time they got back to the car, dusted coats and fixed hair and powder and was a wonderful dream.

At the gate he made his last appeal:

"No one will ever love you better than I do, Kitty. And it's for all our lives remember . . ."

"I can't be poor," she sobbed. "And you'd hate it, too. You must marry someone with money, Phil. Oh, poor Phil! I'm sorry—but I can't indeed I can't!"

"And this is your last word?" he asked in a strangled voice. "If I go now I never come back; you understand that?"

Dusk Too Deep

He bent and tried to see her face, but the dusk was too deep now.

"And you don't—care," he said in hoarse wonderment. He let her go, and stood there like a man turned to stone while she fled up the little garden to the house. He waited, and then he heard the sharp click of the front door as she shut it against him.

He came to, feeling for his hat, and she had flung it back in his face because she couldn't bear to be poor!

He turned away and began to walk home. His step was as firm as ever and he held his head proudly erect, but the heart of him was breaking for the pretty dream that had gone so easily away.

There was compensation besides Philip Winterdick who had found it impossible to settle down to anything on the evening following the tennis party. When everybody had gone, Eva Dennison wandered restlessly about the garden in the dusk till one of her brothers found her and demanded to know what she had got the hump about.

She was the eldest of the family, and, in the words in which the boys intimately expressed their admiration for her, she was a real sport.

Useless Person

On more occasions than they could remember she had stood between them and their father's anger; over and over again in the old days before wealth knocked at their door Eva had bolstered after them like a mother, sewing on odd buttons and scraping pennies together for some small treat, working early and late to make life more bearable, and sacrificing herself in a thousand small ways.

Mrs. Dennison was a useless, fretful sort of person, who from the moment the necessity for economy ceased had her fingers manicured and firmly refused to use them again for anything more strenuous than fancy work.

She imagined that by so doing she was proving herself a suitable wife for a rich man; she spent most of her time now reclining on a couch in her too elaborate drawing room, or taking short drives in the expensive car which was the terror of her soul.

She loathed motoring, she looked for accidents at every corner, but as the Winterdicks and every one else who was any one had a car and used it, she hid her fear and followed their example.

Only the chauffeur, perhaps, knew what a penalty the daily run was to his mistress or recognized the note of real agony in her voice as she besought him in a whisper to "Drive carefully, John."

"It's a shame to expect mother to go in the car," Eva said more than once to her father. "I'm sure she hates it."

"Hates it!" Ralph Dennison looked at his daughter with blank amazement in his shrewd eyes. "Hates it! Is she? Then which old Winterdick were, regardless of the fact that what looked well on the tall, slim figure of the owner of the Highway House, looked absurd on his own portly proportions.

He had long since cherished a scheme in his ambitious mind by which his daughter was to marry Philip Winterdick, but that his opportunity would ever arise to make the way easy for him had never once entered into his calculations.

He had never cared particularly for Eva. He had wished all his family to be rich, but since they had left the town where he had laboriously built up the foundations of his wealth, and come to live in the fashionable Long Island town, Eva had grown in importance.

She Was Pretty

He began to realize that she was pretty. He was proud that the Arlingtons had taken her up. He never minded what he gave her to spend on clothes.

"Buy what the other girls buy," he told her. "Buy clothes like those Miss Arlington wears, and you'll look as well as she does." Dash it all! Do you think I'm going to have my girl out out by people like them?"

Eva flushed. She hated this ostentation and show. She was naturally a simple, unaffected girl. She knew quite well what people thought of her and her family, and she knew that the Winterdicks, courteous as they always were when they met, in their hearts looked down upon them.

That knowledge hurt intolerably. She envied Kitty Arlington bitterly because of the long line of ancestors she had to back her up.

Rogues and vagabonds they may have been. That did not matter. They were at least ancestors and blue-blooded, and she knew that to Philip and his parents they mattered far more than all her own wealth. .

Eva had cared for Philip Winterdick from the first moment of their meeting. For her he was the one man in the world. Such things do happen sometimes in spite of advice.

"Not that you ever look at me, I know," she told herself again and again.

But this afternoon, when he had so carelessly thrown her over in order to be with Kitty Arlington, she had felt as if she could bear it no longer, and when her brother came upon her wandering about the garden later in the evening there were very obvious signs of tears on her face.

He slipped an arm about her waist with a sort of embarrassment.

"What's up?" he demanded. "What are you fretting about, Bonnie?"

Bonnie was the boys' nickname for her. Nobody knew quite how it originated or why, but they never called her by any other name.

"I am not fretting. . I'm tired, that's all"

"Well, then, you'd better come indoors," he advised. "Father's been asking for you all the evening. I say"—his voice changed to a sort of perplexity—"have you decided how frightfully self-satisfied father's been looking lately?"

Eva shook her head.

"No. Has he? Perhaps he's made some more money." There was a touch of bitterness in her voice. What was the use of money? It could not buy the one thing in all the world that she wanted.

They turned back toward the house.

"How do you think things went off this afternoon, Peter?" she asked, with an attempt at her old cheeriness. "I played a rotten game, I know—did you notice?"

He shook his head.

"You can't always be on top of your form," he said, rather absently. "I say—Kitty Arlington's a stunner, isn't she?"

"She's very pretty," she said, with an effort.

Peter shrugged his shoulders.

"Couldn't say, I'm sure," he said, laconically. "She doesn't wear a ring if she is." There was a little pause. "Does she?" he asked, a trifle anxiously.

Surely Peter . . . but Peter was such a boy—only just turned two-and-twenty; she tried to shake the thought aside.

"Well, she soon will, if she doesn't now," she said, decidedly. "It's one of those things that are . . . well—in the air, you know."

CHAPTER XX.

MISS RUSSELL set face a mask moved briskly about putting Miss Bailey's room in order.

Miss Carney herself lay on the bed, propped up with pillows, her reading lamp lighted, "Garden of the Singing Girl" in her lap. It was be fore seven. The dinner tray had gone down. Yet Miss Carney—in a state of violent excitement—had refused sharply for her to be unpressed for the night. And the widow, poor was right there by the bed.

Miss Russell hesitated in the doorway.

"I'm very comfortable here" said Miss Carney, abruptly. "I'll ring when I need you. No, don't close the door. I want the air."

Miss Russell moved discreetly away. The study door stood open. She paused there looking at the telephone instrument on the desk. She went on downstairs. There was another such instrument on the lower stair landing, but Mrs. Bentley was in the living-room reading the paper. To her Miss Russell spoke, in a voice of professional quiet.

"I'm going to run over to the drug store. If Miss Carney rings I'll be right back."

"Will! Listen! Something's got to be done at once!"

"What on earth's the matter, Esther?"

"That fellow—Miriam's been in father's study with him. In mist have carried her in. She calmed she walked. Imagine! What can we have been thinking of to let things run so loose! She opened the safe for him. Then put some of the papers into a strong box Miss Russell saw him carry the long way when he went home."

"But how does Miss Russell—"

"She—she says she thought I ought to know. Miriam called her in. She actually saw it. The thing's gone further than any of us dreamed . . . Well, don't sit there like that! Do something!"

Yes I know dear, but——" Will slowly rose, leaned rather helplessly against the centre table. "But you must give me a minute to think."

Time to Act

"What! What is there to think about? It's time to act now. There isn't a minute to be coming back this evening Miriam would find Miss Russell undress her. She's gone there's some understanding . . . I can't stand there like that! Can't you do something."

"Well, my dear, now wait just a moment——"

"That's it! Wait! Wait! Wait! And meantime he packs father's secrets into a tin box and carries them away. And meantime Miriam came waiting there to give him more, hopelessly infatuated! She drew herself up, flushed with a burning rage. "Why"—she cried—"why didn't I marry a man! A man!" And stormed out.

The person she had happened to marry thrust his hands into his trousers pockets and for a brief time paced the floor. Then he snatched up a cap and rushed out of the house and down the hill to Mr. Ammes'.

Amme said "If you'll just leave this to me I think something may be done."

To which Will in some relief, replied, "Good! And call on me if I can help." And to the still excited woman waiting on his front porch he remarked

"I've started things, my dear Now you must try to keep patient You and I mustn't appear too much in this. Everything that can be done's being done."

Miriam lay motionless listening. The front door opened and closed, a faint but familiar sound far below. She lifted her head. Color crept into her pale cheeks.

The nurse glanced in at the door "You may go out for a while, if you like said Miriam in a wraithless voice.

"But—but you'll be going to bed. Miss Carney

"Oh, no! Not now I'm comfortable enough, this way. I'd rather be alone. When I'm ready for bed I'll call Mrs. Bentley."

Miss Russell slightly pursed her lips, but recollected herself and moved discreetly away

"And you must just leave the door open," said Miss Carney. "I like the air."

The nurse's mouth twisted into a queer half-smile as she moved off down the hall Miss Canney didn't seem to know that she had spoken twice about the door. Things were going along at a great rate!

Miriam listened while Miss Russell went to her own room, then downstairs and out of the house Through the open window came the sound of her quick, light step on the stone sidewalk, a sound that died away.

She lay back on the pillows, closed her eyes; tried to compose her thoughts. It would be difficult;

she knew that. After years of suffering and solitude, he had come like a mad angel into her life. At her secret imaginings were suddenly, irresistibly embodied in him. Her reason, she knew, was going, was gone. It seemed a day since she had seen him

Step on Walk

There was another step on the stone walk. Her quick ear so acted it from the other familiar sounds of the city. Needless of the pain in a curious way welcoming it — she raised herself on an elbow What was pain now! She had stood alone. He had done that to her after all these years. She resented all the others—Esther, this nurse who suddenly seemed a stranger, Mrs. Bentley, Dr. Martin—fiercely resented them. The feeling was so near hatred that it frightened her, left her confused. They had kept her down, cautiously surrounded her; but he, the merest thought of him, was a flame in her breast. For him she had risen and walked. She thought of it, now, as a miracle. During the years she had forgotten how to walk.

That almost familiar step turned in at the front walk. It was a man Could it be he? The bell rang, far below. There was a long wait. Then the door opened; there were faint voices and a step on the stairs. He came up and up Her color was coming and going, her pulse beat high in her temples

He was right here now on this floor He went into the study and quietly closed the door

She lay there struggling desperately to clear away the unreason that clouded her thoughts. Then, unsuccessful in this, swept helplessly, blindly along on a torrent of sheer feeling, heedless of the pain the effort brought, she somehow got herself from the bed to her chair, and, white now, propelled herself back into her sitting-room

The narrow door was closed. For a long moment she lay back, motionless, gazing at it

She heard him then, moving about. His fear seized her that he might suddenly go. He might have come for a paper or a book.

She wheeled around and tapped at the door. It opened so quickly that she started

The strong box stood on the desk; he had brought it back

He spoke first. This was a relief She felt that she couldn't have broken that silence

Stingiest Person

One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

The furnace in a church in a town in Pennsylvania needed repairing The matter was brought up before the church committee, which consisted of five men, each worth at least fifty thousand dollars. During the discussion which ensued one of the committee stated that, in his opinion, there was only one way to raise the money (about $80), and that was to place a mortgage for that sum on the parsonage.

When a Girl Marries

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

"I THINK that part of it is all right, Lyons," I said. "If Mr. Hondley had taken my word about you, as he practically bound himself to do, of course you wouldn't have left him for some one else. But he didn't live up to what he led me to expect. He took a chance and lost. Besides that, I'm sure Mr. Norreys would never dream of suggesting anything to you or anyone else unless it was perfectly right and ethical. So we can trust him and not worry on that score."

"That's that, then, ma'am" said Lyons. "But there's this to it beside. You gave your word about me to this Hoadley person, and I don't want you put in no false light."

The fine chivalry of it, the thoughtful decency of this ex-convict, brought tears to my eyes

"Lyons, you can trust yourself and your feelings to lead you right forevermore, I'm sure I said. "But if there's a man in the world whose own integrity will help you to clinch your honesty and to rivet it to your soul it's the man you're working for now

An' I can stay with him?" cried Lyons, in a tone of great relief "Oh, Mrs Harrison, I ain't able to tell you how glad I be? I thought I had to take up with this other guy—beggin' your pardon, ma'am, but he is summat of a boarder even though I do say it so as shouldn't"

Ran Into House

Then I turned and ran into the house. In the hall, Ivy met me with the mail sack brought from the postoffice She fished a letter out of the bag she was carrying and at sight of the writing on the envelope I actually crept on tiptoe stairs and sneaked to my room where I could be all b, myself with this letter from Jim.

Twice I read the letter, taking it in dimly, a bit at a time. Gradually the full force of it worked its way into my consciousness.

Our oil field is represented by a series of holes in the ground. The wells are dry. The managers have absconded. Jim, the promoter, is responsible. Half mad because the friends who trusted him are losers, he still hopes to save something out of the wreck. And with this in view, he is trying to run down the man behind the swindle even if he has to travel the world ever to do it. A check will come to you from the oil field for $1,200—so much became clear to me after a time. It explained Jim's sudden departure for parts unknown. In the midst of my chaotic feelings one sentence pricked out like a glaring light

"A check will be sent you from the office each week"

But Jim didn't mention Miss Storrs, the woman he'd left in charge of the office. Determined to banish not only that thought, but the chain of ideas it called up, I returned to the letter. again I read the last page:

Once a Month

"I'll wander about until I make good. Once a month at least I'll manage to get word to you, my Lilac Lady. But I'll have to ensure the future of not having a word from you, because if you knew where to find me I think your wonderful loyalty would bring you to me. Keep me alone, dearest, to work this out"

I've thought and thought till I went almost mad, and this is the only way Don't try to find me, for I can't come back till I've made up enough part of their losses to the good friends who trusted us. Bless you, my darling. I'll come back to you some day, for I love you and nothing on earth can keep us apart. You'll wait. That makes this pilgrimage of mine possible With all my love, Your Jim"

With tears filling my eyes, I held the letter against my heart. But a second later I slipped it into the bosom of my gown and went to answer a sudden imperative knocking at the door.

Preserve the Beauty of Your Complexion

By the Use of Black and White Peroxide (Vanishing) Cream.

Each day your complexion is exposed to many things which will eventually destroy its beauty if allowed full sway. Poisonous particles of dust daily accumulate in the delicate skin pores, causing blackheads and pimples; sun and wind, chap and redden.

To remove all "dirt," to prevent chapping, to give a clear, delicate smoothness and freshness to your complexion use BLACK and WHITE Peroxide (Vanishing) Cream.

As a foundation for your face powder and rouge, as a guarantee against a "shiny" nose or "made-up" appearance, Black and White Peroxide (Vanishing) Cream is unequalled.

All leading drug and department stores guarantee and sell Black and White Peroxide (Vanishing) Cream at 25c a jar. For a free trial of Black and White Beauty Treatment and personal advice regarding your complexion worries send upon request to Beauty Culture Department, Plough Chemical Company, Memphis, Tenn.

Rules of the Movie Play Title Test

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Movie Play Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England.

Two prizes of $1,000 cash awards will be given to those two participants in the contest readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the 30 pictures to be published one each day consecutively in the Daily American and Sunday Advertiser.

All employes of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the Test.

The Test will consist of 30 pictures, representing the title of a Moving Picture Play, to be printed one each day in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, Monday, Sunday, February 27, 1921, inclusive.

Participation in any one contest will bar participation in any other contest which may be conducted by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture. No more than two sets shall be entitled to more than one award in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, and filled out with name, address and street number, if any, of participant, as each title blank is numbered to correspond with the picture in that form, i. e., do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are not complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the largest number of correct titles, and in case of a tie for any of the cash awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and style, and any of the contest be declared in favor of that way the tied participants will receive regular awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. ERRP

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Play Title Test Editor, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 9, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Play Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 9, Mass." On the upper left-hand corner envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written and stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

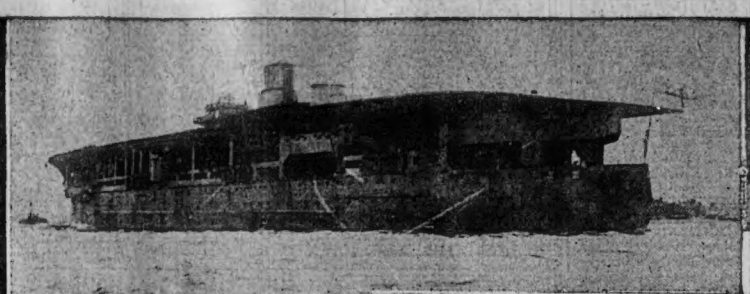
As all pictures in the Test will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates. No mail will be delivered to the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Here lists by mail or titles answer need be sent in. Movie Play Title Test Editor, Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. This list appearing will explain how and where to get correct titles.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Play Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 9, Mass., and not to the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. If participants desire personal replies they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 6100 or call in person.

The Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to make any rules or additions to these conditions that they may deem necessary for the fair and properly conducting the Test, and the decision of the Boston American Play Title Editor on any question which may arise will be accepted final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

DETAILS OF THE MOVIE PLAY TITLE TEST, WITH NAMES OF THE CO-OPERATING THEATRES, WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE 7



GOOD MORNING, SWEETIE!—This baby gorilla is the latest addition to the London zoo. He's right from the jungles of Africa and he's a bear—or rather a monkey—for pastry. (Wide World.)

UGLY DUCKLING—That's what British naval officers call this aircraft carrier, the H. M. S. Eagle. The upper deck is cleared, with the funnels on one side. The "busses" have no trouble in getting enough speed up to slide gracefully into the air. Eagle has displacement of 20,000 tons. Uncle Sam, take notice. (Wide World.)

DUCK 'EM, BOYS—Neptune party on the U. S. S. Pennsylvania getting ready to duck the rookie tars as the ship goes across the equator. It's part of the Gobs' merry life. (K. & H.)

BACK AGAIN, B'GOSH—Here's something snappy in white satin, crystal trimmings and tulle. That goes both ways, too. One of the new smart evening gowns. (U. & U.)

KID PRODIGIES—Florence Stern, twelve, and Sammy Kramer, eight, both exceptional violinists, are going to "bust" farther in fame by having their faces modelled. These youngsters sure his fiddle. (U. & U.)

SOME PILL—This is the largest projectile used in the war and is now at the Imperial War Museum Paisan. The shell, weighing 2,300 pounds, is more than six feet tall and was used to rout the Jerries at Jutland. Note the pair of cuckoos guarding the big powder pill. (Wide World.)

A RAW, SORE THROAT

Eases Quickly When You Apply a Little Musterole.

And Musterole won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Just spread it on with your fingers. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. It is fine for quick relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds on the chest. Nothing like Musterole for croupy children. Keep it handy for instant use. 35c and 60c jars, hospital size $3.00

MUSTEROLE

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness of irritation.

"DANDERINE"

Girls! Save Your Hair! Make It Abundant!

Immediately after a "Danderine" massage, your hair takes on new life, lustre and wondrous beauty, appearing twice as heavy and plentiful, because each hair seems to fluff and thicken. Don't let your hair stay lifeless, colorless, plain or scraggly. You, too, want lots of long, streaming, beautiful hair.

A 35-cent bottle of delightful "Danderine" freshens your scalp, checks dandruff and falling hair. This exhilarating "beauty-tonic" gives to thin, dull, fading hair that youthful brightness and abundant thickness—All druggists

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain youthful appearance and attractiveness. Don't be darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it darkens so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

GEORGE WHITE PRESENTS 1920 'SCANDALS'

Lots of Variety in Revue Now Playing at Colonial Theatre

By FRED J. McISAAC, Dramatic Editor.

Mr. George White, a diminutive dancer, presents, if you please, "Scandals of 1920," a very elaborate and showy entertainment, which has already captivated New York and Chicago.

This event occurs at the Colonial Theatre before audiences that are big even for that very fortunate home of musical entertainment. Mr. White's show is a success because he has hired a whole slew of big type entertainers and makes them earn their swollen salaries.

There is Ann Pennington, the tiny dancer with the bright eyes and plump bare knees. There must be Scotch blood in Ann because the Highland costume in her only comfortable garb. She expresses herself, as the free verse critics would have it, through her marrowbones.

Ann (they I call you Ann, Ann?) is one kind of a dancer. La Syiphe is another. If Ann stops with Scottish kilts, La Syiphe's garments is for a pair of bathing trunks. She is wiggley—creepy—scratch the ear-with-the-toe sort of dancer, and one of the best of that kind—if you like the kind.

ASSORTED COMEDIANS.

For comedians they have an assortment. Lou Holtz is one kind. He is a black-face Hebrew and his specialty is singing songs which would make Eddie Cantor envious. Then there is Lester Allen, a boy-sized funny man, but a marvel at making 'em laugh, and George Dickel, who can imitate William Jennings Bryan so well that Bryan himself would have to grow a beard to tell them apart. George White, in person, drifts on and off, but uses discretion and retains his popularity.

This array of talent appears in little comedy skits, in spectacular scenes, and in front of the curtain, a la vaudeville. There is a lot of vaudeville in the show, with chorus trimmings, but it is good vaudeville.

ATTRACTIVE SETTINGS.

The settings are attractive without being so expensive that White is exempt from an income tax. One of the scenes change so quickly that you miss two or three if you happen to wink your eye.

All the news events of the day get attention, including the ridiculous landlords, the politicians and the Bolshevik menace from the Russian.

When "Scandals" ran in New York City it was accounted a very rough show, even for that cavorting metropolis, and truth to tell it is no place for persons of refined palates—even now that the city censor has done a little chiseling upon it. However, after "Aphrodite" and "Gertie's Garter," Mr. White's "Scandals" are not so terribly scandalous, and they are frequently very droll.

GOMPERS BANS INTERNATIONAL TRADE UNION

Declares A. F. L. Refuses to Aid Move Aimed at Overthrow of Democracy

Washington, March 16.—"We must decline to be a part of a movement that undertakes the overthrow of the democratic government of the United States."

This is the keynote of the letter recently sent by Samuel Gompers as head of the American Federation of Labor, withdrawing from the International Federation of Trade Unions. The communication was made public today.

Other reasons given for withdrawal are that the new constitution of the international organization completely abrogated the principle of complete autonomy for each national trade union federation, and that the system of dues would place an unbearable expense upon the American Federation.

Anglo-French Imperialism Inviting the Red Flag

The only thing that can be said about Europe with certainty is that it is being steadily driven in the direction of a war which will surpass all wars the world has seen in violence and destruction.

The folly of the responsible leaders who are inviting this conflict cannot be measured in words.

All the world knows how foolishly and to what tragic ends the leaders wrought at Paris. But all the folly of the responsible Three and all the woe their folly brought upon the world will be light indeed when weighed in the balances of fate against the folly that is now regnant in Paris and London, and the woe which that folly will bring upon broken and tormented Europe.

There is not a single State in Europe which does not contain a majority, or a very powerful minority, of proletarians who are ready to overthrow the governments and seize the property and destroy the lives of all capitalists, big or little.

The only thing which has held these revolutionary sentiments in check has been the steadying influence of the bourgeoisie—of what we, here in America, vaguely call the middle class.

And just as Germany was formerly the industrial balance wheel of Europe's peaceful economic strife, so Germany has been the political balance wheel of Europe's class strife.

If the German people, in rage and despair, decide to throw Germany into the arms of the Red Internationals, and decide that they would rather take friendly dictation from Lenin than to submit to the vindictive dictation of Foch and his negro hordes, then the edifice of European society, which has so long endured the blows of circumstance and the attacks of time, is doomed to fall before the storms of revolution and the assault of armed communism.

Both Lloyd George and Aristide Briand are playing a game of personal politics and domestic triumph. But both are playing with fire, with dreadful, terrible, consuming fire.

These men know well that they can never get the enormous price of defeat which they demand that Germany shall pay.

If the soil of Germany could be scraped clean of every vestige of wealth—crops, tools, buildings, machinery, railroads and everything else—and the very soil itself could be confiscated, it would scarcely pay the bill presented.

What, then, is the object of the British and French leaders in demanding the impossible? Why, clearly to find some excuse for the invasion and military subjugation of the German Republic.

And what is the object of that invasion and proposed subjugation?

That question involves as many answers as there are motives in the tortuous and altogether abominable villainy that dignifies its lies, thefts and murders with the name of diplomacy.

Fear, hate, power, dominion, spoils, military "glory"—all these motives play their part in the hearts and minds of the men who are inciting and planning the fresh invasions, the fresh wars, the fresh conquests with which the tormented and unhappy peoples of Europe are being threatened.

Entrenched behind their cannon, ringed with bayonets, the land covered with their armies and the seas covered with their warships, these plotting diplomatists and military chiefs do not appear to suspect even that their cannon may be turned against them, that their soldiers may bayonet them, that they may be victims of those means of murder which they have so liberally prepared for the slaughter of the masses.

They have seen with their own eyes the Romanoff dynasty destroyed and the Czar shot by his own soldiers and subjects. They have seen the Hohenzollern and the Hapsburg dynasties destroyed and the two kaisers driven into exile by their own soldiers and subjects. And the fall of these three ancient dynasties, under the blows of peoples who had been ruled by these royalties and their nobilities for centuries, does not seem to have taught either Lloyd George and his Tory chiefs, or Aristide Briand and his military chiefs, that cannon and bayonets cannot defend a government from its own people's rage and despair, whenever that rage and despair permeate the ranks of the soldiers who are drawn from the people.

The next two or three years, the next few months, it may be, will determine the ultimate fate of Europe's peoples, and the fate of those ancient institutions of government, law, property, exchange, credit and the varied relations of capital and labor which have long constituted the framework of civilization.

French armies and British fleets have begun to move in martial array against the peoples of Central Europe and Russia, and this very year may be the moment from which future historians will date the beginning of the fall of the established governments and institutions of Europe and the beginning of the dominion—however temporary it may prove—of the Soviets and the Red flag over every State and capital from Moscow to Madrid and from London to Delhi.

DON'T BE JUST A TIME FILLER

Is your daily work an enthusiastic pleasure or merely a "job" to you?

And do you hold the job merely for the money it brings in?

Do you ever put your whole heart, body and soul into your daily work?

Isn't it true that you often think of the man above you in the business as a fool for putting in so much energy, so much thought and so many hours when he might get along with less effort?

Well, if the truth were known it would indicate that you shirk responsibility, sometimes from fear of displaying ignorance and sometimes to avoid doing something which would make you think hard and faster than you wish.

You may be better fitted in many ways to fill the job of the man higher up, but it is pretty clear to your employer that you are just holding a job and the man they put in the place of trust must be dependable, enthusiastic and an energetic worker, not a time filler.

You cannot win anything worth while unless you bend your back and your heart to take a load and carry it well and gladly, because you really like the opportunity to show your mettle.

BRITISH MACHINE GUNS RULE IN INDIA

Taraknath Das Relates the Tragedy of Little Babu Row, a Typical Story of What Is Happening Today All Over That Country

By Taraknath Das,
National Secretary of Friends of Freedom for India

THE following is a typical story of what is happening all over India. The account is taken from an Indian newspaper published in Madras, called the Hindu. The facts are corroborated by the British official version which is printed in the same issue, December, 1920:

On December 9 little Babu Row, died in the General Hospital at Madras. He was the only son of his widowed mother. He had to go to work early, for children are allowed to work in India. From nine to fourteen they may work in the factories for six hours a day, and after fourteen for twelve hours.

Work in Mills

Babu's mother had to take him from school and put him to work, for there wasn't any food. The average income per capita in India is $9.50 per year. Even in India that isn't enough to live on. Statistics show that over 100,000,000 cannot have one full meal a day. Babu never had a full meal. He worked in the Carnatic Mill. Sometimes he earned as much as $2 a month, sometimes only a dollar. But he was a plucky little boy and very much alive. He always wanted to know what was going on.

When the men in the Buckingham Mills got locked out, he went down in the afternoon to talk with them. The men from the Buckingham Mills were very restless. Ever since the day the High Court had issued an injunction restraining Mr. Wadia and other labor leaders from associating with the mill hands, they had been murmuring. The mill authorities had imported coolie labor. They had also applied to the commission for a police escort. In the morning and the afternoon the coolies were conducted to and from the mills, and the people gathered to see them pass.

Taunted Crowd

One day the coolies began to taunt the crowd, and make insulting remarks and waVe their money. The hungry mill hands could not stand it. They began to throw stones. The police escort stopped, the crowd fled, two arrests were made. But when the police had again gotten into the lorry, the crowd returned. Once more they threw stones; this time at the police.

Then the officer ordered the machine gun turned on the people. They did not fire in the air, but straight at the unarmed people. A woman was shot and sixteen wounded, some fatally.

Among them little Babu. He had not run away. Why should he? He had done nothing naughty. He just stood there. Then came that blinding volley. In an instant the little face was ripped to pieces. They took him to the hospital, but it was no use. In four hours he was dead. There was no Babu for the mother to gather to her arms. The eager little boy with the brown face had been shot down and killed.

It was an angry crowd of 9,000 people that gathered in the compound in the late afternoon. Mr. Wadia, the labor leader, had to speak to keep them quiet. He reminded them of their great leader, Mahatma Gandhi, of his teaching, of his demand that national freedom be won not by violence, not by the sword, but by the spirit.

"I believe that non-violence is infinitely superior to violence, forgiveness is more manly than punishment. Forgiveness adorns a soldier. But I do not believe India is helpless. I do not believe myself helpless. Only I want to use India's and my strength for a better purpose. Let me be not misunderstood. Strength does not come from physical capacity; it comes from an indomitable will." (The Doctrine of the Sword by Mahatma Gandhi.)

Had No Guns

The crowd grew quiet. They believed in the words of their teacher. Besides, they hadn't any guns with which to fight the British. But they were a nation of 315,000,000.

The next day they gave little Babu a royal funeral. The body was brought to the Otary burial place. An extraordinary procession formed, with Mr. Wadia at its head. Hundreds upon hundreds joined at every turn. It took an hour to reach the burial place. Among them were Mohammedans, Indians, Christians and Hindus of all sects, laborers and non-laborers. All were perfectly silent.

When they were nearly there the Mohammedans and Hindus uttered their funeral cries: "Govinda—Allaho—Akbar." Tears rolled silently down faces as the cries were taken up passionately by the multitude. When the procession reached the burial spot, hymns were sung and the Sanskrit chanted. Then the big crowd stood silent, offering prayer.

The body was lowered into the ground and the earth shovelled, and a little plant was placed on the grave. Then Mr. Wadia spoke.

Labor Leader Speaks

He quoted the "Ghita." He reminded them that the soul of man is immortal. He spoke how the wonderful sacrifice that unconsciously their young friend had made for them. The blood that was split would be a sacred memory. He said the body of Babu Row was dead, but the man in him was alive and would come back to carry on the work he had so splendidly begun. If any of them ever wavered or had doubts, let them come to this sacred spot to remind themselves of the great sacrifice made that India might live.

So ends the story. But this is only one of many. All over India similar tragedies are occurring. The English are attempting to put down the India nationalist movement by force. They have imported aeroplanes and machine guns. They are using them freely.

Taraknath Das will describe the methods employed by the British in the Punjab uprising in tomorrow's Boston American.

The Old Wooden Cradle

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

GOOD-BY to the cradle, the dear wooden cradle,
The rude hand of progress has thrust it aside.
No more to its motion o'er sleep's fairy ocean
Our play-weary wayfarers peacefully glide.

No more by the rhythm of slow-moving rocker
Their sweet dreamy fancies are fostered and fed;
No more to low singing the cradle goes swinging—
The child of this era is put into bed.

Good-by to the cradle, the dear wooden cradle;
It lent to the twilight a strange, subtle charm.
When bees left the clover, when play-time was over,

How weird were the voices that whispered around.
What dreams would come flocking, as rocking and rocking

The old wooden cradle, is ruthlessly cast.

KEEP STILL BEST WAY TO BRING PEACE

By The Spectator

WHAT follows is not preaching. It is not aimed to improve your character, nor save your everlasting soul.

It is strictly business. It is intended to give you a suggestion that will be worth money in your pocket, and also bring peace and contentment to your mind. It will be of more actual value in the way of making you feel good, providing you have sense enough to follow it, than a pound of smoking tobacco or a quart of that ancient beverage formerly known as Red Eye.

It is this:

Never, under any circumstances, to yourself, or to anybody else, indicate, admit or say that another person has hurt your feelings.

Psychological Law.

This is based upon the primary psychological law that our state of feeling is induced and perpetuated by our habit of expressing our feeling.

Those who continually say they are snubbed really get snubbed; they advertise for people to snub them.

If you talk of being insulted you are laying the ground for being insulted again.

And this is not an appeal to your conscience, your morals or your religion. It is an appeal to your common sense. I do not ask you to be good, to be moral, to do right, or anything of the sort, but merely to repress your expression of feeling and smother all resentment and complaint with the antiseptic mantle of silence.

I do not say to you that you should notice no slight, feel no injury and allow yourself to suffer no humiliation. I do not say that you should not be hurt when another injures you, nor ashamed when he speaks evil of you. That would be telling you to do something you cannot do. It would be preaching, and poor preaching at that.

But I tell you to do something which any human being in the world can do, something simple, plain and practical. For I tell you merely to Keep Still. No matter what may be your sufferings, you can do that.

Lovers' Quarrels.

And particularly Keep Still toward those with whom you are necessarily intimate. Do not allow them to imagine that they can hurt your feelings.

Nine-tenths of the lovers' quarrels and domestic squabbles arise because one or both sides announce injured feelings.

It is impossible to live with anyone and not be sometimes offended. Human nature is too faulty, and hearts are too sensitive, to get along together without occasionally bruising one another. If we take these bruises with a smile, if we are good sports, and heroically refuse to cry out when we are hurt, those about us will be led to appreciate and trust our fellowship.

Nobody wants to associate constantly with anyone whom he is always wounding, even unconsciously.

Stars and Stripes

The hireling who is paid for his silence is like a dog at his dinner; he dare not bark for fear of losing a mouthful.

He who promises too much is already in debt.

The man whose greatest pride is family, adds little to his family's pride.

By Garrett P. Serviss

And here is another: "A learned professor of Chicago University is said to have made the statement that if you take a bowl of water and weigh it, and then drop in a small fish, the weight of all will not vary. It does not seem possible, but is it true?"

You should stick to your common sense, which already assures you, if you will only believe it, that the statement cannot be true, unless there is some reservation not mentioned.

If a "learned professor" made the statement there must have been such a qualification. If a little water splashed out when the fish was dropped in, the total weight might not be changed. If the quantity of water was large in comparison with the bulk of solid parts of the fish, the change of weight might be so slight that even pretty good scales would fail to register it. The basis of this imperishable paradox is no doubt the supposition that because the water buoys up the fish, therefore the weight of the fish is destroyed.

An Old Problem

When a body is immersed in water it displaces a quantity of water equal to itself in bulk.

If the body is hollow, so that water can enter, it displaces only a quantity equal to its solid bulk. If the body is heavier than water it sinks to, and rests upon, the bottom. Then its pressure on the bottom is equal to that much of its weight by which it exceeds the weight of an equal bulk of water. The rest of its weight has been transferred to the water, being offset by the buoyant force of the latter. But the weight thus taken off from the body by the water, of course, has not been destroyed.

If the body, like that of a fish, weighs just as much, bulk for bulk, as water, it will remain in suspension, its whole weight being counterbalanced by the water, just as if it were a portion of the water itself. But the weight still exists inside the vessel and cannot be gotten rid of unless a proportionate amount of water is removed.

A third question carries us a step farther: "Would it take more weight to hold an empty keg, filled with air, down forty feet than it would ten feet under the water, or which would have the most lifting power, the keg forty feet under water or the keg ten feet under?"

Relative Weight

The difference would be imperceptible, because of the very slight compressibility of water. Here again we have to do with the relative weight of water and of a submerged body. The water presses the body upward with a force equal to the difference between the weight of the body (out of water) and the weight of a quantity of water equal in bulk to the submerged body.

If the body were a cubic foot of white pine wood it would weigh about twenty-eight pounds. A cubic foot of water weighs about sixty-two pounds. Then, to hold the body under water you would need to press it down with a force of at least thirty-four pounds.

This would be practically the same at forty feet as at ten feet depth, because the only thing that could necessitate an increase of force would be an increase in the density of the water, causing a cubic foot of it to weigh more than sixty-two pounds.

To the Editor

"Help Europe"

Editor Boston American:

"Help Europe," the well-known exclamation, has been heard and heeded in these United States during the recent war, in gold coin and, above all, the best of gold—"humanity." And why do they ask for cancellation of debts when the unheeded pleas of our Yankee soldiers are known the world over—for compensation?

The more one gives, the less thanks he receives, and this seems to apply to Europe's selfishness and America's ingratitude to the boys who gave their best for Europe and the United States.
